VIRGINIA REBELLION.

John Brown Sentenced to Death.

His Address to the Court and Jury.

EDWARD COPPIE FOUND GUILTY.

CHARLESTOWN, Wednesday, Nov. 2.

Messrs. RUSSELL and SENNETT, from Boston, reached here to-day.

COOK was brought before the Magistrate's Court, and waived an examination.

COPPIE'S trial was resumed. No witnesses were called for the defence.

Mr. HARDING opened for the Commonwealth; Messrs. HOYT and GRISWOLD followed for the defendant, and Mr. HUNTER closed for the prosecution. The speeches were of marked ability.

Mr. GRISWOLD asked for several instructions to the jury, which were all granted by the Court, and the jury retired.

BROWN was then brought in, and the Court-house was immediately thronged.

The Court gave its decision on the motion for an arrest of judgment, overruling the objections made. On the objection that treason cannot be committed against a State, the Judge ruled that where allegiance is due treason may be committed. Most of the States have passed laws against treason. The objections as to the form of the verdict rendered the Court also regarded as insufficient.

The Clerk then asked Mr. BROWN whether he had anything to say why sentence should not be pronounced upon him.

Mr. BROWN immediately rose, and in a clear, distinct voice said:

I have, may it please the Court, a few words to say. In the first place, I deny everything but what I have all along admitted—viz., a design on my part to free slaves. I intended, certainly, to have made a clean thing of that matter, as I did last Winter when I went into Missouri and there took slaves without the snapping of a gun on either side, moving them through the country, and finally leaving them in Canada. I designed to have done the same thing again on a larger scale. That was all I intended. I never did intend murder or treason, or the destruction of property, or to excite or incite slaves to rebellion, or to make insurrection. I have another objection, and that is, it is unjust that I should suffer such a penalty. Had I interfered in the manner which I admit, and which I admit has been fairly proved—for I admire the truthfulness and candor of the greater portion of the witnesses who have testified in this case—had I so interfered in behalf of the rich, the powerful, the intelligent, the so-called great, or in behalf of any of their friends, either father, mother, brother, sister, wife or children, or any of that class, and suffered and sacrificed what I have in this interference, it would have been all right; every man in this Court would have deemed it an act worthy of reward, rather than punishment. This Court acknowledges, too, as I suppose, the validity of the lnw of God. I see a book kissed, which I suppose to be the Bible, or at least the New Testament, which teaches me that all things whatsoever I would that men should do to me, I should do even so to them. It teaches me further, to remember them that are in bonds, as bound with them. I endeavored to act up to that instruction. I say I am yet too young to understand that God is any respecter of persons. I believe that to have interfered as I have done, as I have always freely admitted I have done, in behalf of His despised poor, no wrong, but right. Now, if it is deemed necessary that I should forfeit my life for the furtherance of the ends of justice, and mingle my blood further with the blood of my children, and with the blood of millions in this slave country whose rights are disregarded by wicked, cruel and unjust enactments, I say let it be done. Let me say one word further. I feel entirely satisfied with the treatment I have received on my trial. Considering all the circumstances, it has been more generous than I expected. But I feel no consciousness of guilt. I have stated from the first what was my intention and what was not. I never had any design against the liberty of any person, nor any disposition to commit treason or excite slaves to rebel, or make any general insurrection. I never encouraged any man to do so, but always discouraged any idea of that kind. Let me say also in regard to the statements made by some of those who were connected with me. I fear it has been stated by some of them that I have induced them to join me, but the contrary is true. I do not say this to injure them, but as regretting their weakness. Not one but joined me of his own accord, and the greater part at their own expense. A number of them I never saw, and never had a word of conversation with till the day they came to me, and that was for the purpose I have stated. Now, I have done.

While Mr. BROWN was speaking perfect quiet prevailed, and when he had finished the Judge proceeded to pronounce sentence. After a few prefatory remarks, he said that no reasonable doubt could exist of the guilt aof the prisoner, nd sentenced him to be hung in public on Friday, the 2d of December next.

Mr. BROWN received his sentence with composure.

The only demonstration made was by the clapping of the hands of one man in the crowd, who is not a resident of Jefferson County. This was promptly suppressed, and much regret is expressed by the citizens at its occurrence.

After being out an hour the jury came in with a verdict that COPPIE was guilty on all the counts in the indictment. His counsel gave notice of a motion for arrest of judgment, as in Mr. BROWN'S case.

The Court then adjourned.

NAT TURNER, THE VIRGINIA HERO.

LECTURE OF REV. J. SELLA MARTIN.

The third lecture of the Anglo-African course was delivered last evening in the Shiloh Church by Rev. J. SELLA MARTIN, of Lawrence, Mass. His subject was, "NAT TURNER, the Virginia hero." In commencing, the lecturer wished to correct a statement in the Anglo-African Magazine for October, that in 1830 emancipation had just commenced in New-York, and had been arrested in Virginia by NAT TURNER and the Walker family. From 1826 to 1840 spirited discussions had been held in Virginia in regard to emancipation, and it was in 1831 that an emancipation act failed by one vote of passing the Virginia Legislature. The causes of its failure were the invention of the cotton gin and the great demand for slaves. It had been said that NAT TURNER was a fanatic. He only is a fanatic who is opposed to truth. WASHINGTON opposed himself to the most powerful nation on earth, yet he was considered a conservative. Now, fanaticism and conservatism had changed places. The present conservative was the former fanatic, and the conservative of yesterday is the fanatic of to-day. No matter whether one spoke by word of mouth, as PHILLIPS and GARRISON; or by the pen, as BEECHER; or by the sword, as JOHN BROWN—all these were true conservatives. It was strange, passing strange, that in 1776 the American people failed to see the power of the logic now used. It was not fanaticism then. He thanked God that liberty had always been radical, and that no one had ever borne in the army of freedom the standard of fanaticism, properly so called. Moses and Socrates were moral fanatics. Jesus Christ was a religious fanatic, Our conservatives were the Gerrit Smiths, the Garrisons, the Phillips and the Horace Greeleys, the tallest of them all. Could he lay his hand upon a bundle of fanatics, he would grasp RUFUS CHOATE, with his little package labelled "glittering generalities," and EDWARD EVERETT, who prated so much of WEBSTER. CHOATE got his education in a Democratic caucus, WEBSTER in the Senate, and EVERETT from both of them. This trio were the greatest fanatics since the time of BENEDICT ARNOLD. From these he turned to the conservative of Virginia. NATHANIEL TURNER was born in the county of Southampton, Va., on the 2d of October, 1800. Mr. MARTIN had no fanciful tales to relate of his precocious childhood, for he supposed he ate, slept and grew like other boys. Superstition had attributed to him supernatural powers, which had a great influence on his life. It had been said that NAT. TURNER never had a dollar; but he had many a dollar which he spent for powder, too. His misfortune was he never learnt to steal. He was a great diplomat. Here the speaker related several instances where NAT. TURNER had, by his tact, shielded the slaves from punishment when their plans had been betrayed. TURNER'S favorite book of the Bible was Revelations, and his interpretation of it had a hidden meaning to his followers. He was always a true, honest, sympathizing man. NAT TURNER was a great leader. He avoided the difficulty of all insurrections, viz.: too much system and too much organization. It was not till 1830 that he unfolded his plan to any one, and then only to his most intimate friend. On the night of the 21st of October, 1831, he sallied out, with a few associates, to his work of insurrection. The party killed fifty-five white persons, and added to their number seventy slaves. The foray failed because the depredators extended their work of violence beyond the limits assigned them. TURNER fled to a swamp and ere long was captured. When asked at his trial whether he was guilty or not guilty, he said, "I am not guilty of murder, but I am guilty of insurrection, and, so help me God, if I could live my life over, I would do the same thing again." He was permitted to speak to the slaves as he stood on the gallows, provided that he would persuade them not to revolt, but so scathing was his irony that the executioners gagged him. Mr. MARTIN then gave his views upon the late insurrection. He deemed the first requisite of such a movement to be a possibility of success. Had JOHN BROWN gone down to South Carolina, where on every plantation there are five hundred slaves to one or two white men, and taken five or six of these together, he would have been as fully justified as were our fathers in the Revolution. If he [the speaker] had the courage and martial talent, he would not hesitate to do just as JOHN BROWN had done. He would give his sanction to any movement that would break the chain of the suffering slaves. If it could be done by the sunshine of peace, he hoped that God would send that sunshine; but if by leaden bullets, let them be used. Any way to let the colored man have his freedom. In vain he had waited for emancipation. Let the free negroes arise and help Old JOHN BROWN. He wished the reporters to understand that he was not speaking for the Shiloh Church, but for J. SELLA MARTIN, and he cared not what it might cost him. Now was the critical time, when, before God and all honest men, three martyrs were to be tried in Virginia. They stood absolved of all sin, as did WASHINGTON, and it behooved all the colored people to remember that these men had jeopardized their lives for them. Prayer unceasing should be offered up for them, and if money was needed to carry them through the trial, it should be freely given. We ought to feel that JOHN BROWN is the noblest Virginian of them all.

The lecturer thanked his audience for their kind attention to his remarks. He was frequently interrupted by applause.

LETTER FROM FREDERICK DOUGLASS.

CANADA WEST, Monday, Oct. 31, 1859.

To the Editor of the Rochester Democrat:

I notice that the telegraph makes Mr. COOK, (one of the unfortunate insurgents at Harper's Ferry, and now a prisoner in the hands of the thing calling itself the Government of Virginia, but which, in fact, is but an organized conspiracy by one party of the people, against the other and weaker,) denounce me as a coward—and to assert that I promised to be present in person at the Harper's Ferry Insurrection. This is certainly a very grave impeachment, whether viewed in its bearings upon friends, or upon foes, and you will not think it strange that I should take a somewhat serious notice of it. Having no acquaintance whatever with Mr. COOK, and never having exchanged a word with him about the Harper's Ferry insurrection, I am disposed to doubt that he could have used the language concerning me, which the wires attributed to him. The lightning, when speaking for itself, is among the most direct, reliable and truthful of things; but when speaking for the terror-stricken slaveholders at Harper's Ferry, it has been made the swiftest of liars. Under their nimble and trembling fingers it magnified seventeen men into seven hundred—and has since filled the columns of the New-York Herald for days with interminable contradictions. But assuming that it has told only the simple truth as to the sayings of Mr. COOK in this instance, I have this answer to make to my accuser: Mr. COOK may be perfectly right in denouncing me as a coward. I have not one word to say in defence or vindication of my character for courage. I have always been more distinguished for running than fighting—and tried by the Harper's Ferry insurrection test, I am most miserably deficient in courage—even more so than COOK, when he deserted his brave old Captain and fled to the mountains. To this extent, Mr. COOK is entirely right, and will meet no contradiction from me or from anybody else. But wholly, grievously and most unaccountably wrong is Mr. COOK, when he asserts that I promised to be present in person at the Harper's Ferry insurrection. Of whatever other imprudence and indiscretion I may have been guilty, I have never made a promise so rash and wild as this. The taking of Harper's Ferry was a measure never encouraged by my word or by my vote, at any time or place; my wisdom or my cowardice, has not only kept me from Harper's Ferry, but has equally kept me from making any promise to go there. I desire to be quite emphatic here—for of all guilty men, he is the guiltiest who lures his fellow men to an undertaking of this sort, under promise of assistance, which he afterwards fails to render. I therefore declare that there is no man living, and no man dead, who, if living, could truthfully say that I ever promised him or anybody else, either conditionally or otherwise, that I would be present in person at the Harper's Ferry insurrection. My field of labor for the abolition of Slavery has not extended to an attack upon the United States Arsenal. In the teeth of the documents already published, and of those which may hereafter be published, I affirm that no man connected with that insurrection, from its noble and heroic leader down, can connect my name with a single broken promise of any sort whatever. So much I deem it proper to say relative to myself.

The time for a full statement of what I know, and of all I know, of this desperate but sublimely disinterested effort to emancipate the slaves of Maryland and Virginia from their cruel task-masters has not yet come, and may never come. In the denial which I have now made, my motive is more a respectful consideration for the opinions of the slaves' friends, than from my fear of being made an accomplice in the general conspiracy against Slavery. I am ever ready to write, speak, publish, organize, combine, and even to conspire against Slavery, when there is a reasonable hope for success. Men who live by robbing their fellowmen of their labor and liberty, have forfeited their right to know anything of the thoughts, feelings or purposes of those whom they rob and plunder. They have by the single act of Slaveholding, voluntarily, placed themselves beyond the laws of justice and honor, and have become only fitted for companionship with thieves and pirates—the common enemies of God and of all mankind. While it shall be considered right to protect oneself against thieves, burglars, robbers and assassins, and to slay a wild beast in the act of devouring his human prey, it can never be wrong for the imbruted and whip-scarred slaves, or their friends, to hunt, harass and even strike down the traffickers in human flesh. If anybody is disposed to think less of me on account of this sentiment; or because I may have had a knowledge of what was about to occur, and did not assume the base and detestable character of an informer, he is a man whose good or bad opinion of me may be equally repugnant and despicable. Entertaining this sentiment, I may be asked why I did not join JOHN BROWN—the noble old hero whose one right hand has shaken the foundation of the American Union, and whose ghost will haunt the bedchambers of all the born and unborn Slaveholders of Virginia through all their generations, filling them with alarm and consternation! My answer to this has already been given, at least impliedly given. "The tools to those that can use them." Let every man work for the abolition of Slavery in his own way. I would help all, and hinder none. My position in regard to the Harper's Ferry insurrection may be easily inferred from these remarks, and I shall be glad if those papers which have spoken of me in connection with it, would find room for this brief statement.

I have no apology for keeping out of the way of those gentlemanly United States Marshals, who are said to have paid Rochester a somewhat protracted visit lately, with a view to an interview with me. A Government recognizing the validity of the Dred Scott decision, at such a time as this, is not likely to have any very charitable feelings towards me, and if I am to meet its representatives, I prefer to do so, at least, upon equal terms. If I have committed any offense against Society, I have done so on the soil of the State of New-York, and I should be perfectly willing there to be arraigned before an impartial jury; but I have quite insuperable objections to be caught by the hands of Mr. BUCHANAN, and "bagged" by Gov. WISE. For this appears to be the arrangement—BUCHANAN does the fighting and hunting, and WISE "bags" the game.

Some reflections may be made upon my leaving on a tour to England, just at this time. I have only to say, that my going to that country has been rather delayed than hastened by the insurrection at Harper's Ferry. All knew that I had intended to leave here in the first week of November.

NEWS BY TELEGRAPH.

MOB LAW IN BALTIMORE.

The State Election—Three Persons Mortally Wounded—Numbers Shot, Stabbed and Beaten—Defeat of the Reformers.

BALTIMORE, Wednesday, Nov. 2—10 P. M.

The State Election has taken place to-day. In all the Wards of this city mob-law was uppermost all day; and consequently the reform vote is extremely light. Indeed, so impossible was it for a man of respectable social position, or of known sympathy with the Reform movement, to approach the polls, that the Reformers are, perhaps, justified in their assertion that the whole affair was a burlesque of an election, and that there has really been no choice. The returns, such as they are, had not been received at a late hour, owing to the number of officers voted for upon one ticket.

Judge GILES, of the United States District Court, met Sheriff CREAMER in the street this forenoon and told him in decided terms that he was to be held accountable for all the blood shed to-day. As a Judge and lawyer he told the Sheriff he had the authority, and that it was his duty to interfere.

There was considerable talk of a Vigilance Committee on the streets.

The First, Second and Fourth Wards were entirely in possession of the rowdies, to the total exclusion of all who opposed them. The Police refused to interfere.

In the Second Ward a man named CHARLES BARKARD was shot in the hip.

In the Fifth Ward the Reformers were driven off at an early hour. A son of Hon. JOSHUA VANSANT was beaten for attempting to vote. A man, name unknown, was dreadfully beaten.

In the Tenth Ward, THOMAS MARTIN, the Reform Judge, was early intimidated and compelled to leave, and Mr. HINSLEY, who was appointed by Acting Mayor MAYO and rejected by the Council, was reappointed. The Reformers were entirely driven off. JAMES JEFFERS, son of MADISON JEFFERS, was shot in the side and beaten over the head by some Reformers whom he had maltreated.

In the Eleventh Ward, the stronghold of the Reformers, Mr. GEORGE M. GILL, made a speech at noon announcing the withdrawal of Mr. THOMAS, the Reform candidate for District Attorney. Dr. ROBINSON, of the Central Reform Committee, came to the Eleventh Ward polls at 3 o'clock and announced that the Reformers had been driven from every Ward except that and the Eighth, and counseled the Reformers there to withdraw to avoid further bloodshed; whereupon Dr. THOMAS, Reform Judge, retired, and the contest was abandoned. Previously the Reformers throughout the city withdrew, leaving the polls in the hands of the dominant party.

In the Twelfth and Sixteenth Wards gangs of rowdies from Washington, fully armed, were on hand aiding the Baltimore roughs.

In the Fourteenth Ward there is a desperate struggle. The Reformers resisted with arms. JOHNSON, a notorious rowdy, was shot dead with a pistol ball. Two other rowdies, named HARRIS and DUFFY, were shot in the legs. HENRY STARR, a Reformer, was shot in the leg. WM. STILES, a Reformer, was shot in the arm and leg.

In the Fifteenth Ward, ADAM B. KYLE, Jr., merchant, of No. 88 Hanover-street, Reformer, was shot in the temple and was carried home in a dying condition. He was reported dead at 2 o'clock, but lingered until 9 P. M., when he expired. GEORGE KYLE, who came to the rescue of his brother, was shot dangerously. A boy was also shot in the breast and mortally wounded.

In the Sixteenth Ward THEODORE WOODALL was badly beaten. Dr. C. RICHARDSON, a Reformer, was pursued by the Captain of the Thunderbolt Club, with a drawn sword. Dr. R. took refuge in a store, when the rowdies broke in the windows and tried to capture him, but fortunately they were not successful.

In the Seventeenth Ward the American ticket has an average of 860 votes, and the highest Reform vote is 24.

In the Eighteenth Ward the rowdies took possession of the polls, and gave the Reformers notice to quit. FELIX MCCURLEY, a Reformer, was badly beaten.

In the Twentieth Ward the rowdies knocked down and maltreated whom they pleased. They had a swivel on the ground.

There are numerous reports of minor outrages on the private rights of citizens in several Wards.

WILLIAM P. PRESTON, Democratic candidate in the Third Congressional District, is lying at Barnum's Hotel badly beaten about the head with a billy. The most reliable account is that Mr. PRESTON was assaulted at Gowanstown, in the Ninth District of Baltimore County. One account says he was beaten by an Irishman. It is difficult, in the face of so many reports, to arrive at the truth.

The streets are nearly deserted to-night, except by the victorious party.

The stores were all closed at dark.

The proprietor of the Exchange, having been threatened with assault, made a demand on the city authorities for protection.

BALTIMORE, Wednesday, Nov. 2—Midnight.

First Ward—American, 678; Reform, 58.
Third Ward—American, 1,491; Reform, 252.

The returns from Havre de Grace show an average American majority for Congress and the State ticket of about 60—a small loss.

BALTIMORE, Thursday, Nov. 3—1 A. M.

Fifteenth Ward—American, 840; Reform, 100.
Sixth Ward—American, 870; Reform, 220.

These returns are the average vote on the tickets.

BALTIMORE, Thursday, Nov. 3—2 A. M.

The returns from the different Wards in the city will not be in for some hours yet. The Americans have, however, without doubt, carried the city by about 18,000 majority.

Three Precincts from Hoffman County give HOFFMAN, (American) for Congress, 228 majority—a gain.

Two precincts in Alleghany County give KUNKLE, Democrat, for Congress, 138 majority—an opposition gain.

FROM WASHINGTON.

Americans in Mexico—Murder of Ormond Chase—The New-Granada Treaty.

WASHINGTON, Wednesday, Nov. 2.

Mr. CONNER, the United States Consul at Mazatlan, is now here. He has obtained from the Constitutional Government several concessions of a commercial character, one of which is permission to run a steamer on the Mexican Pacific coast under the American flag. He has partially made arrangements with one of the steamship companies to connect with its line at Acapulco, thereby affording a direct steam communication on that entire coast twice a month.

The dispatches from Consul BLACK to the State Department show that ORMOND CHASE was most atrociously murdered in Mexico by officers belonging to the Church Party. All that was in the President's power to do will be or has been done in view of that crime. If more than this is necessary to protect the lives and property of American citizens in that country, Congress must provide further means. There is no doubt but the President will prominently present this subject in his annual Message.

The friends of the Constitutional Government think that it is highly essential that Señor LERDO should immediately return to Vera Cruz, in order to exert his influence toward the consummation of the pending treaty.

Gen. HERRAN, Minister from New Granada, is in the city. The prospect now is that the Republic will ratify the treaty as amended by the United States Senate. The Granadian Congress will not, however, meet till next February.

The Postmaster-General left here to-day on a brief visit to Charleston. Therefore, no definite action on the bids for carrying the mails between Portland and New-Orleans will be made until his return.

Judge BLACK'S rejoinder to Senator DOUGLAS' last will appear in the Constitution of to-morrow morning.

Loss of the Bark Dragon.

PROVIDENCE, Wednesday, Nov. 2.

The bark Dragon, Capt. MCFARLAND, of and for Salem, which sailed from Zanzibar, Aug. 31, got ashore on a reef about 40 miles south of that place, and remained three days, thumping heavily.

She was got off and towed back to Zanzibar, Sept. 4, by the British ship-of-war Clive. Her keel was broken, stern-post started, and she was otherwise so badly damaged that she was condemned. The Clive was awarded $3,200 salvage.

Fire.

PROVIDENCE, Wednesday, Nov. 2.

The lumber of ASA PIKE in this city, together with three or four small buildings, were destroyed by fire this evening. Loss about $20,000.

European Steamers.

NON-ARRIVAL OF THE AMERICA.

HALIFAX, Wednesday, Nov. 2—9 P. M.

There are as yet no signs of the steamer America, now due at this port with Liverpool dates of the 23d ult. Weather very thick.

SAILING OF THE EUROPA.

The Orthodox church, at Lincoln, Mass., was totally destroyed by fire last night. Loss $6,000.

SPEECH OF HON. THOMAS CORWIN.

Doctrines of the Republican Party—The Harper's Ferry Troubles—Interruptions and Replies.

BROOKLYN OUT IN FULL FORCE.

An audience numbering nearly two thousands persons persons assembled in Musical Hall, Brooklyn, last evening, to hear an address from Hon. THOMAS CORWIN, of Ohio, who, it was announced, would present his views upon the political issues of the day, and more especially upon the doctrines of the Republican party, and the recent occurrences at Harper's Ferry. Precisely at 8 o'clock, the meeting organized by the unanimous selection of Mr. JAMES HUMPHREYS as Chairman, upon the nomination of Mr. SETH B. COLES.

Mr. HUMPHREYS, on taking the chair, acknowledged the compliment briefly, and forthwith introduced the speaker of the evening, who was received with vehement applause, including three lusty cheers for "TOM CORWIN."

Mr. CORWIN said he perceived that there were a great many who would be compelled to listen to him—if they could at all—under very uncomfortable circumstances. But he was very sure—if they were sympathetic men—they could not feel much more uncomfortable than he did himself. [Laughter.] He had been accustomed, as many of them might know, to address popular assemblies for about twenty years of his life, and they must recollect that the audiences which he had been in the habit of addressing in the Western country, were composed of the most refined and polite inhabitants, [laughter,] and he felt a little awkward in addressing himself to the barbarians of New-York, [renewed laughter,] but he must try and bring himself down to their comprehension. [Continued laughter.] He felt disposed, if they would tolerate him, to lay before them what he understood to be the doctrine of the Republican Party. He did not know what that doctrine might be in New-York, but so far as he had been able to inform himself, the grand fundamental doctrine upon which the party now rested before the people for its hope of success was very much the same in every part of the United States where they were tolerated at all. The geographical divisions between the North and South were not in accordance with the ordinary rules of geography. They comprised in the word North every State that does not tolerate Negro Slavery, and in the word South those States where Negro Slavery prevails. He had seen something of the origin of that peculiar class of politics denominated Northern and Southern. He thought he was at the birth of that unhappy division, in the councils of the country, filling a humble post, as a Representative in the Lower House from the State of Ohio. They knew that the great constitutional truth, which was the great fundamental idea of the Republican Party, was at one time the admitted doctrine, and the cherished policy of the men of the South, as well as of the North. The doctrine had now been advanced that slave labor would stand absolute, and that there was a difference of interest between the labor of a free man entering into a compact to perform labor by himself, and the labor of a man who was serving as capital in the hands of his owner. The idea originated in the increased value of negroes. If it had not been for one Yankee, this idea would never have arisen; he meant the inventor of the cotton-gin. [Laughter.] The consequence of that invention was a rise in the value of negroes from about $300 each to from $800 to $1,200 each. From 1833, then, began this conflict, which, if he might be supposed not to intend treason, he would say seemed almost to be an "irrepressible" one. [Laughter.] He hoped they would not understand him as having any affiliation whatever with JOHN BROWN. [Applause and laughter.] He had none. He remembered at that time that the people of South Carolina abandoned the ordinary way of carrying on their State government and called the people together to plan a convention. Their conviction was, that the law of the United States, then called the tariff, was unconstitutional; and they had resolved that the Constitution of the United States was a compact between sovereigns—a treaty; that when the stipulations of the treaty were violated, each sovereign had a right to determine for himself, and withdraw from the compact, and assume the right of independent sovereignty. Then came the question whether the Government of the United States could continue to collect the revenue within the limits of South Carolina. Their opposition rested on the opinion that the law levying duties upon merchandise, the chief part of which came from Great Britain, operated unfavorably upon the South; that it was favorable to free mechanical labor, but unfavorable to the slave labor of the South. That was the argument when it was considered a question of policy and justice. But, the Constitution had another way, and that belonged to the Courts. He thought this was the time when the irrepressible conflict began. The Northern men supported the idea that it was better to advance the interests of the negro slave labor of the South, than the white labor of the North. That was the trap into which the Northern Democracy had fallen. It was a conflict between slave labor in the South and free labor in the North, at that time; they knew what it had arrived at now.

Now it was said that the Congress of the United States had no power to prohibit the establishment of this institution of Slavery anywhere, but that the States in their sovereign capacity alone have the power to prevent that institution from taking root anywhere. He was one of those who had some reverence for the Constitution of his country—he was one of those "old fogies" [laughter and applause] who did believe that the founders of the Republic and the makers of the Constitution instituted an organization which they presented to us and which they understood quite as well as we do ourselves. Although he had considerable self-sufficiency, he had found that there were other men who had brain as well as himself—[laughter]—none of them quite as much, [renewed laughter,] still, when his modesty was brought out, he was willing to tell them, as the expression was in Arkansas, that they were "some pumpkins." [Continued laughter.] He therefore relied upon what was called "long practice." It would be found that the very first law after the organization of the new Government in 1789, was a law that was entitled "For the Protection of American Manufactures." When they told him that that law was not founded on the Constitution of the country, he would tell them that the gentleman who wrote that Constitution was a member of Congress at the time the law was passed. He who made the Constitution read it, and wrote it, said that that power was in it. Now, the question was did not the author know what he meant better than any one could tell by reading it? He was not acquainted with the honorable gentleman beside him, (facing that much embarrassed personage with an humorous facial expression,) but suppose him to be the author of the Constitution, would he (Mr. CORWIN) not feel embarrassed to look him in the face and say, "Sir, you are such a stupid ass" [suppressed laughter] that you do not know what you meant by these words as well as I know by reading them." [Roars of laughter.] They would not think that refined manners. [Renewed merriment.] Yet that was illustrative of the very controversy between parties upon that very point of the Constitution, as to the power of the Federal Government to outstretch its arm over the territory of the Government to establish this institution of Slavery. Every exposition of the Constitution, from the establishment of the Federal Government down to the year 1852 exhibited but the one result. And now they were told that that Constitution carried its panoply of protection over Slavery in every foot of territory belonging to this country, where a State Constitution did not oppose its sovereign power. Did he who made the Constitution think that Congress had power to make rules concerning the territories? They had perfected the great work of the ordinance of 1787, and they recognized that ordinance in a new constitution as a binding obligation on the new government. What else did they do about that time? Indiana, then a Territory, (in 1803 or 1804, or somewhere about that time,) petitioned Congress to modify the ordinance of '87, to relax its vigor, and allow its people to have slaves, because, being a new country, it suffered under a scarcity of labor. What did Congress do? It declared itself unwilling to grant this relaxation of that ordinance, and one of those petitions was referred to JOHN RANDOLPH, of Roanoke, who answered them to the effect that though they labored under a disadvantage, it was a temporary one, for, their Territory being free, emigration would soon remove the necessity of employing slave labor. Had Mr. RANDOLPH been a popular sovereignty man, he would have said: I dare not interfere with the legislative powers of the Territory. But Popular Sovereignty was not born then. [Laughter.] Had he been a Southern man of the present time, he would have said: The Constitution plants Slavery in the Territories until it is excluded by the State Constitution. This Constitution, he thought, had been presented three times by the people of Indiana, and as often had Congress refused their prayer. In the year 1821 Missouri, a part of the Louisiana purchase, asked Congress for a State organization. Congress said to it: "Go home and expunge this institution of Slavery." But the treaty prescribed that the territory transferred to us by France should be admitted by us as the other States had been, and so was Missouri admitted. The region north of the northern line of Missouri, 36° 30', was regarded as territory, and was thought by this Congress in the year 1821, to be within its jurisdiction, and they concluded that it never should have Slavery. We know the history of that law. MONROE, a Virginian, and a slaveholder, was then President, and he was cotemporaneous with the men who had founded the Constitution. J. Q. ADAMS was his Secretary of State, CRAWFORD his Secretary of the Interior, CALHOUN his Secretary of War, WIRT his Attorney-General, and SOUTHARD his Secretary of the Navy. The very question which was now decided with such flippant indifference by every young lawyer of the country, and especially by every aspiring politician who had read through half a volume of Blackstone, was submitted to those men, and they decided that Congress alone had the power to make laws for the Territory of the United States. [Applause.] Now, he would ask his fellow-Democrats whether the people of a territory had an inherent right to make laws in defiance of Congress, or if the people of 1859 understood the subject better than the seven men who gave their advice to the Government of MONROE'S day. If there were any such man living, he was past praying for—[Laughter]—and he would have nothing more to say to him. If he differed with them, he must regard them as stupid asses,—[Laughter]—and believe that it had pleased God in these days to raise up a man inspired to know more what they who wrote the Constitution did mean, than those writers did themselves. We had heard much of the march of the human intellect, and he (Mr. C.) supposed that most of his hearers believed in the Scriptures; at least he hoped they did,—[Laughter]—and we were told therein that miracles should cease. But if this Popular Sovereignty doctrine were a truth,—if it were true that, under the Constitution, the emblem of our glory, we were to take a nigger under our arm and carry him around,—[Laughter]—then God help us! The New Testament had failed. Miracles had not ceased, because that discovery could not be reached by any process of ratiocination. It was not to be attained by reason, but by inspiration. Congress went right along creating new territory as the tide of population rolled westward, and reserving to itself, in every case, the right, if it disapproved of the Territorial laws, to declare them null and void. In 1848, when Mr. POLK, a Democrat of the Democrats, was President, and when we organized the Territory of Oregon, he signed the bill with the Wilmot Proviso in it. During all this time of which he had spoken, that is for full 50 years, all our Congress and all our tribunals, State and Federal, never did, it was now assumed, understand the Constitution, and it was reserved for the year 1854 to make out its true purport. His notion of the benefit of a written Constitution—(and it must be observed that written Constitutions were an invention of ours)—was this, that the Constitution, being written, limited the power of the people of every department of the Government, whether executive, legislative, or judicial. The intention of a Constitution was that there might be a fixed and stable rule by which the Government might know its just limits, and the people might know what they had to do; and he maintained that when the Executive, Legislative, and Judicial departments had for a given time, sufficient to make it a precedent, declared in what way the Constitution, on any point, was to be interpreted, their interpretation was not to be set aside, unless the people arose, and by their votes announced their wishes to be contrary. And this being the case in regard to this question of the power of Congress over the Territories, he repudiated this new-fangled doctrine of Popular Sovereignty. Whatever might be our belief as to the continuance of miracles, humbugs like this would never cease. [Laughter.] It was not popular sovereignty. Why should it be called by that name? Why, if a man were to strike off another's right arm, and tell him he had prepared him for battle, it would be more reasonable. If one were to cut off the wings of the eagle, point to it its bleeding stumps, and bid it to soar to the sun, he would not be more unreasonable than he who gives to this doctrine the name of popular sovereignty. Mr. CORWIN continued to argue the right of Congressional interference in territorial legislation, and proceeded to inquire what were we to do with this new-fangled doctrine that had been got up by the South? Was there a Court in the United States that had not declared Slavery to be local? Never. But it was said that we had a Dred Scott decision—they were mistaken about that. He was something of a lawyer himself and would tell them that there was no such opinion, and that the Supreme Court of the United States had decided no such thing as was represented. The Court had talked about it, but the issue involved no such thing. The question was whether DRED SCOTT was a citizen, it was not whether Congress made law for the Territories. What was to be done with this Popular Sovereignty? Did they desire that the Legislatures of the Territory should be subjected to the veto power of the man who was appointed Governor because of some miserable service he had rendered, or of the President who had appointed him? God help us if it was so. Would they allow themselves to be controlled by any such opinion as that? It was the strangest idea that had ever entered the head of a sensible man, it was the offspring of a distempered brain. Ambition had sought it out, as a mere spring-board by which it might leap to the Presidential chair. To his brother Democrats, he would say that the Popular Sovereignty doctrine was about as ugly as the ground-hog was to the man out west who was laboring under hypochondrasms, and believed that he had given birth to it; in regard to it said that as long as it was his, ugly as it was, he had to love it. Popular Sovereignty, in exercising its powers in Kansas, had resulted in four years of civil war, out of which came that spectre of insanity and treason, JOHN BROWN. He would ask his Democratic brethren whether, from the beginning of human history, they could point to five States colonized happily exhibiting such evidences of advancing civilization as were those, which under the ordinance of '97 were constituted out of the Northwestern Territory, and in which Freedom was from the first inaugurated. (Cheers.) That ordinance of '97, by which the foot of the slave should never tread on that Territory, laid the foundation of their prosperity and progress. The people of Ohio had had the sagacity to send him to Congress, and with God's help he would establish that doctrine of '97 there. [Laughter and applause.] He would secure to the South all their rights under the Constitution, even to the returning of a fugitive slave, because he would have to swear to support the Constitution of the United States. The fugitive slave law was not so bad as it was represented to be. It was not a good law.

A VOICE IN THE CROWD—Are you sure of that?

Mr. CORWIN—I am sure of it, Sir. If you bring in a justice of the peace I will swear to it. [Laughter.]

ANOTHER VOICE—He is a good Republican.

Mr. CORWIN—There was a law passed in 1793 exactly like that of 1850, with this exception, that the latter provided that there should be Commissioners appointed by the Circuit Courts of the United States for every county in the State to judge as to the matter involved in the case of fugitives from Slavery, but he (Mr. C.) thought it would have been better to have let the power remain as under the old law, with the State Judge, who, on sufficient evidence being given, should say to the master: "You have a right to your servant." But I say that if the Constitution allows this to be done why then it ought to be done. [Cheers and applause.]

Mr. CORWIN continued, amidst repeated interruptions, which he answered with good-humored promptitude and no little effect, to discuss the question as to the obligation of obeying the law, even though it were a Fugitive Slave Law. He vindicated MILLARD FILLMORE, as President, from the charge of being favorable to Slavery, because, in obedience to what he considered to be the requirement of the law, he had signed the Fugitive Slave Bill; and paid a high tribute of praise to CLAY and WEBSTER, for whose memory he invoked the admiration of their countrymen for all time to come. It was almost 10¾ o'clock before Mr. CORWIN concluded.

Obituary.

DEATH OF HON. DANIEL CADY.

Hon. DANIEL CADY died on the 31st October, at his residence in Johnstown, N. Y., aged 88. He was one of the oldest lawyers in the State, having been admitted to the bar in 1795. He served in Congress during one term, and was elected a Judge of the Supreme Court of this State in 1847, but resigned in 1855 in consequence of increasing infirmity. The Albany Evening Journal, alluding to the circumstances of his career, says:

"For thirty years previous to taking his seat in the Supreme Court and Court of Appeals, he stood in the front rank of the bar of this State in abstruse learning relating to the law of real estate, and in trials of actions of ejectment, he had no superior. Indeed, his cotemporaries of twenty, thirty, and more years ago, yielded to him the palm in this branch of the profession. In the department of special pleading he had few equals."

THE GREAT EASTERN.

She Fails to Establish New Principles of Economy—Great Eastern and Collins and other Ships Compared—Prince Albert's Visit—Probable Movements of the Vessel.

From Our Own Correspondent.

LONDON, Tuesday, Oct. 18, 1859.

My letters about the Great Eastern's trial trip, I fear, have been too technical in their criticisms and conclusions to be popularly interesting,—a pardonable error, I hope, in a matter almost wholly scientific.

I would now simply submit, as a review of the whole matter, a few plain reasons why the Great Eastern thus far fails to establish any new and momentous facts in the philosophy of Ocean Navigation.

The cost of locomotion depends upon two principal conditions. First—The amount of power required; or, in other words, the steering gear. I have not yet seen or heard of any other considerable repairs or alterations necessary to the safety of the ship or the comfort of the passengers. The captain says he is ready to start at any time for an ocean voyage—that he considers the vessel perfectly seaworthy.

On the whole, I rather think the ship will leave about Nov. 1 for Portland. But my state of mind in reference to the great ship company's words and deeds cannot be defined as faith.

The great events of the ship's stay at Holyhead have been the visit of Prince ALBERT, yesterday, and that of Prince NAPOLEON to-day, if the telegrams are reliable. Prince ALBERT was not accompanied by the Queen, a great disappointment to the public generally. The Prince took a great interest in the engineering department. It must be an intolerable nuisance to intelligent men like Prince ALBERT to be tagged round in their excursions by newspaper flunkeys, who write to their respective sheets every remark that falls from the illustrious lips, as if common questions and criticisms were so very miraculous. One of them says, with the necessary italics and points, that, after looking at the hoisting-crane, his Highness asked how it worked?—as much as to say: "Bless my soul, his Highness can talk!"

If the Great Eastern does not go abroad, she will coast round like a menagerie till Spring. But I think she will certainly go to America soon, simply because the men who have so far controlled her movements are in favor of such a course. TUBAL CAIN.

STATE OF ITALY.

The Assassination of Anviti—Affairs in the Legations and Venice—Piedmont—Mazzini's Letter.

From Our Italian Correspondent.

LUGANO, Tuesday, Oct. 11, 1859.

The news that the treaty of peace had been signed at Zurich is contradicted; but it matters little, as the Italians are convinced that a lasting peace can never be signed between Italy and Austria until the Alps, Nature's own barrier, divide them. I guess that the protraction of the Italian Question is beginning to weary your Italian sympathy, and that all the care and thought you have to spare from the San Juan business and the coming Presidential election, is shared between the Constantinople conspiracy, the Chinese squabbles, and the Spanish flag question in Morocco. The idea is gaining ground here that the cause of the American Consul's having received his passports from the Tuscan Government is his covert assistance given to the intrigues for the restoration of the Grand Duke. I sincerely hope these insinuations will be proved calumnies; in any case the Italians are too well aware of the feeling of the people of the United States in favor of a people choosing its own form of government to imagine that the Consul, if guilty, acted at the instigation of his Government.

Hitherto the wonderful tranquility of that vivacious people has been undisturbed, but the late disastrous event at Parma has filled the public with dismay, concerning the Anviti tragedy. A friend of mine, who was traveling in the same train, from Bologna to Parma, sends me some interesting details. He says:

The fact is much to be regretted, inasmuch as it will give a handle to our enemies to resuscitate the accusations of assassinations and anarchy to which the last six months of unexampled order and tranquility have given the lie; but let the true state of the case be known, and the public will find other parties than the over-excited populace to blame in the affair. CALATIEL ANVITI was one of the most unscrupulous tools of the late Duke of Parma, and continued his savage career under the Duchess; in 1852, under the mere pretext that the populace sought his life, he caused some fifteen citizens to be arrested, and without proof, almost without trial, two were executed. Not only was he held in abhorrence by the people, but was also execrated by his soldiers, whom he treated more like dogs than men. When the Duchess retired from Parma, he at once fled from the retribution which he knew awaited him from the people he had so barbarously maltreated. For some time nothing was known of him, but lately it was discovered that he was residing at Rimini, and great was the surprise that the Government of the Romagna, so zealous in the expulsion of republicans, should have unmolested that arch-fiend of reaction. I cannot help thinking that despite his disguise (he was dressed as a peasant) that he was recognized by two Parmesans as soon as he entered the train at Bologna. The bridge over the little river Enza is broken, and the passengers have to descend and cross the bed of the torrent in omnibuses. I saw two of them keep their eyes on this man, but without addressing him. They followed him closely, entered the same carriage on the other side, and when we arrived at the station of Parma they requested him to descend. He began to bully, asked them who they were, said he had taken his ticket for Piacenza and should proceed to his destination. "Colonel ANVITI," said one of them, "unless you come along with us quietly, I will tell your name to the people here and leave you to your fate."

He turned very pale but said not another word; his two captors accompanied him, one on either side, and conducted him to the barracks of the Carabinieri. I, who knew what were the antecedents of this man, could not help admiring the manner with which the two Parmesans kept their own counsel, and secretly hoped that the Government would not fail to make an example of the wretch, who certainly had no good reason for returning to that province, where he could only have come to conspire with the friends of the Duchess against the peace and wishes of his countrymen. About an hour after, as I was dining at my hotel, I heard shouts from the mob rushing past my windows in the direction of the barracks, "Death to Anviti. Death to the traitor. Vengeance. To the barracks," &c. Knowing him to be in the custody of the Carabinieri I had no apprehensions for his safety. But about an hour after the waiter came running in exclaiming, "They've finished him up; they've killed ANVITI."

I dashed to the barracks, but it was all over; it seems that there were not more than ten soldiers there at the time, and from the crowds still on the spot I should say that the entire populace of Parma had gathered there; the mob was in a state of phrenzy, vainly the citizens had pleaded, harangued, threatened, prayed in the name of mercy and of Italy that the wretched life might be spared—the mob had broken open the gates and the doors of the room where he was confined, had dragged him into the street, and in a few minutes all was over. They were promised that if they would relinquish their hold he should be tried by Court-martial on the morrow, and some, it seems, were ready to give in, but the most ferocious cried, They'll acquit him; they'll never hang him; the town is full of spies, full of agents of the Duchess; let's give them a lesson. Death to Anviti; death to the traitor!

And he died a traitor's death. The corpse was lying at an adjoining cafe. I did not see it; I am told it was frightfully mangled and torn. The perpetrators of the deed, and their name was legion, had a sullen, hang-dog look when it was done. I heard a man in blouse say to a group, "Yes, you've done for it now; we shall have the Duchess brought back by the French." "What did he come for?" retorted one of those addressed; "he knew he'd be let alone, he knew he'd find his comrades." And another, "It will be a lesson to the rest. We've only avenged GIORGIO." GIORGIO is the name of one of ANVITI's victims.

There is a gloom over the city that is indescribable. What will they say at Bologna, in Tuscany, in Modena? They will say we have compromised their cause! There has been a talk of arrests, but no one knows who to arrest; the soldiers say that hundreds entered the barracks at the same moment. Many letters were found on ANVITI's person at the moment of his arrest, two double-barreled pistols, and a Papal passport. I have not seen the letters, but I am told that they contain important revelations; they are chiefly in cipher, and only the initials of the names are given.

Such are the facts of the tragedy. Every Italian with whom I have spoken bitterly regrets the event. All blame the Provisional Governments for the license allowed to Papal and Ducal plotters, while the slightest manifestation of opinions more advanced than those of the Governments, are punished with imprisonment and exile. All are anxious that Piedmont should take immediate possession of Parma and Piacenza. Nothing having been said about them at Villafranca, it is alleged that she may do so with impunity.

Bologna has at length followed the example of Tuscany and Modena. Since I wrote you last the arms of the house of Savoy have been formally affixed to the Governmental Palace—the Legations are governed in the name of the King elect—the passports and Custom-house lines between Piedmont and the Central Provinces, are to be abolished, and the weights, measures and coins equalized. These measures give universal satisfaction. There was some talk of uniting the four provinces into a single State, to be governed by a single dictator, until the King should take formal possession, but an opinion was current that this would be a stepping-stone to the much-talked of Kingdom of Etruria. Despite the opposition of the Archbishop, a Te Deum was chaunted at which the deputies, civil and military authorities assisted, and then the populace with common accord avoiding the Governmental Palace, met under GARIBALDI'S windows and indulged in their accustomed vivas.

The public feeling against CIPRIANI increases daily even the few Piedmontese journals who used to defend him have turned against him now. Besides the thousand crowns a month to which he helps himself, together with seventy crowns for his carriage, thirty thousand crowns for secret expenses appear in his budget. And this, say the Bolognese, when FANTI and GARIBALDI are appealing in vain for the funds necessary for the maintenance of the army.

The dignitaries of the Holy Mother Church seem determined to try the long-suffering of the Italians to the uttermost. The Archbishop of Reggio, by refusing permission for the celebration of a funeral service for the volunteers who fell in the national war, and for the chanting of a Te Deum for the annexation of Modena to Piedmont: the Archbishop of Bergamo, who came off better than he deserved for similar misdemeanors; the Archbishop of Bologna, who decreed the commemorative service for MANIN, carried the day; but, when the same worthy forbid the use of the Church on the 2d October for the Te Deum, the Government was appalled at the popular ire, and the Te Deum was sung in spite of the express orders of the Archbishop, who declared that but for the ancient abuse which made the church of San Petrario the property of the municipality, he would have locked the gates. It is lucky for these dignitaries that they are more the object of scorn than detestation to the Italians, else the consequences might be serious.

One must become familiar with this people, their modes of thought and feeling, fully to understand the perfect indifference with which they regard the proceedings of the Papal hierarchy. They look on the Pope, the Cardinals and Archbishops as an inevitable nuisance imposed on them for the imaginary benefit of the Christian world. The priest is for them a type of greed, cunning and ignorance—a grade lower in the scale of being than the sbirro or the gens d'armée, and that is especially the case in the Roman States. In Lombardy, before '48, the priest was decidedly the pastor of his flock, though he has sadly degenerated, thanks to the Concordat; still he is looked on with less suspicion than elsewhere. The exhortations or anathemas of the Vatican fall unheeded on Italian ears.

GARIBALDI's appeal to the contingents returning to their homes from the Sardinian army did not promise them a long respite from military service. It is as follows:

"The hour for a fresh attack (riscassa) is not far off. The enemy menaces and will soon attack us. Turning to my companions in arms of Lombardy, I know that I do not speak to deaf men, when it is a question of combating the enemies of Italy. Therefore I expect you in the ranks, and soon."

In fact, the entire North is roused from the inaction of the last few months. The lethargy of LA MARMORA, the Minister of War in Piedmont, is the theme of the entire Italian Press. Lombardy is unarmed, and is impeded from arming; the Lombard soldiers returned from Austria are sent to their homes. VIGLIANI, the Governor of Lombardy, who follows in the same steps, is the object of general animadversion; but volunteers are hastening to the camp, and the loan for 10,000,000 francs, for military purposes, put forth by FARINI, has been covered in a few days. GARIBALDI's appeal for a million of muskets has met with the most energetic response. Cremona, honored by his choice, has sent 400 volunteers, equipped, to his camp, and the journals are covered with subscription lists. The emigration from the Venetian provinces increases daily. The Ost Deutsche Post laments in no measured terms the progress which Italianism is making in Trieste, the city most favored by Austria, the maritime rival of Venice; while the correspondent of the Gazzetta d'Augusta writes from Verona that "the Venetians have made up their minds to drive out the Austrians at any cost; it is impossible to reason with any Italian on this head. The Veronese show the greatest opposition. The chief cause is the vicinity of the Lombardo-Piedmontese frontier. The youth emigrate in masses."

A most significant fact for those who knew Venice during the Carnival, is the decision of forty-four out of the fifty-three shareholders of the Theatre of the Fenice, that it shall not be opened this year. GREGORETTE, one of the Presidents, opened the sitting with a touching description of the domestic calamities of the ruin of the municipalities, and of the pending hopes and fears of their countrymen, which would render all manifestations of festivity out of place. The Government and the officials, together with the military, ardently desired the opening of the theatre; the former to convince the world that Venice s'amuse, the latter in order to amuse themselves, finding the captured bride extremely unamusing through grief for her lawful spouse—but the theatre belonging to a private company, the national feeling carried the day, and what Venice will be during the Carnival I leave those who have seen her in days gone by to judge.

Despite the 250,000 soldiers in Venice, Austria's attitude is one of bewilderment rather than of triumph. The Venetians have passed suffering, passed fear, past sorrow. I have watched and lived in Italian affairs so long that I even doubt of immediate success yet. Something tells me that the cup of Venetian misery is drained to the dregs. Whether Piedmont and Austria go to war again in the Spring, or whether abandoned by Piedmont, Central Italy rises up in self-defence, when Venice is sure to join, I cannot tell, but I feel with MERCANTIN:

"Ah! childless will Venetian mothers be,
But Venice, our own Venice, will be free."

It is affirmed that RATAZZI is about to propose a law for the naturalization of the Venetians, and the following words are attributed to him: "The distinction between Lombards and Venetians has to be abolished, as that between Tuscans, Modenese, Parmesans and Piedmontese. We are all only Italians." It will be a great protection for the poor emigrants, for by the Piedmontese law no citizen can be expelled the States or arrested without being put on trial, whereas exiles from the other States who are not naturalized are sent out en masse on the slightest pretence.

The Piedmontese are beginning to clamor for the re-opening of the Chambers, not so much for the internal administration as for the watch their deputies enable them to keep on public affairs. The Lombards, too, are impatient for the enjoyment of the Constitution which has been their ideal for so many years. They are sick of VIGLIANI and MANIN, and the late dismission of three of the first professors of the University of Pavia, has filled the public with indignation.

The Unione attacked the Governor of Lombardy with its usual virulence. The Governor replied to that journal, and denies that he had anything to do with the Professors. So much the worse, if he allows bad deeds to be committed in his name with impunity! The Tuscan Government is gaining ground with the public. It is asserted that a meeting was held in the house of the Marquis RIDOLFI, the Minister of Public Instruction of the Representatives who voted the union with Piedmont. When all were present the Marquis rose up and said, "I swear on the head of my father, that let who will intervene to restore the ancient government, I will take my gun and rush to the defence of our legitimate votes," and the Deputies, with one voice, replied: "We swear to do the same."

MAZZINI's letter has been very favorably received by the Piedmontese and Lombardy Press. The Diritto, the first paper in Turin for talent, administration, and national sentiment, quoting long extracts, says: This is the frankest and noblest approach to a submission of all other ideas to the idea of nation unity that has ever been made by the Republican party, and hopes it will be met in a similar spirit. The Lombardia, the official journal, exclaims:

"So MAZZINI, following ALBERTO MARIO's example, offers an amnesty to the King if he will but make Italy one. It seems, then, that GIORGINI (reversing FASCOLI's prophesy) is right. In order to destroy the sects Italy must be created."

The official sneer is evident, but the affirmation is true.

The Progresso, the most advanced and daring newspaper now existing in Italy, noticing this favorable reception, commenced the republication of the letter; the entire edition was soon exhausted, and the last copies sold at 10 cents instead of two. The censor was silent and the Editor drew a long breath of relief when night came on, but next morning at the instigation of the French Police the sbirri appeared to seize the remaining copies—not one was to be found!

The Pro-Slavery "Revival."

Mr. J. D. ALLEN, a member of the State Senate in South Carolina, was recently invited to deliver an address before the citizens of Christ Church Parish, on the "Revival of the African Slave Trade." Being unable to accept the invitation, he wrote a letter declaring his full sympathy with the movement, and his confidence in its final success. He also adds the expression of certain opinions on the general subject of Slavery, which are sufficiently novel to be worth reprinting. He says:

"The question is everywhere gaining strength throughout the length and breadth of our common country. The North is striving for the mastery and possession of the Government. This is natural. All sections will do it, have ever done so, and will so continue. They are intelligent, patriotic and wise. As such I do not fear them. They love the Union, and I feel confident that they will take no step which will force us ultimately to seek our rights out of it, in this question.

Governments, like all other great bodies, move slowly, and cast their shadows before them. The Dred Scott decision is one of these. The Supreme Bench of the United States has, in defiance of Abolition frenzy, established and declared castes in society, enunciating the great fact that negroes, Indians and the tawny sons of Asia, the Caroline Islands, and those great groups of the Central Archipelagoes of the Pacific, cannot become citizens of our Confederacy. This is progress. England and France are evidently shifting ground in our favor by the Coolie system of the one, and the Apprentice system of the other.

Hayti and St. Domingo are daily announcing verdicts in favor of Slavery; while the Colonization Societies of our North are in despair with their efforts to establish the equality of the African caste with that of the Caucasian, whilst their respective Legislatures are enacting laws from year to year for their expulsion from their midst; and in our own South free negroes are voluntarily surrendering their liberty, and selecting masters for their protection.

The great object of government is the protection of property. Society first organized in its earliest conventional forms with reference to this object.

This is the substratum on which all that is good and noble amongst men is erected, the great superstructure which evolves the splendid attributes of humanity, and establishes land-marks between men and animals. Our Constitution everywhere announces its recognition of property in slaves, and binds our Government to its protection, without defining geographical outposts to its authority. It must perform its duty. It must become the paramount behest of its mission.

I am, with high regard, your friend and fellow-citizen, J. D. ALLEN.

IMPORTANT FROM UTAH.

Horrible Massacre of Emigrants near Fort Hall—Proceedings of the Federal Court—Important Evidence concerning the Parrish Murder—Mormon Complicity in Crime.

From Our Own Correspondent.

CAMP FLOYD, U. T., Wednesday, Oct. 5, 1859.

Within the last two weeks five emigrant trains have been robbed of their cattle almost within sight of the Camp. It is unnecessary for me to write the particulars of these robberies; suffice it to say that it is a well-known fact that we are surrounded by organized bands of robbers, and that both the army and the civil authorities are powerless to break them up, arrest their members, or protect emigrants. Emigrants cannot travel on any of the known overland routes from the States to California with any degree of safety either to their lives or their property, and it is a duty that the public Press owes to our countrymen to tell them so.

Another horrible massacre was committed on what is known as the Northern route on the 31st of August. I send you a copy of an affidavit of one of the survivors, viz:

Nelson Miltimore, being duly sworn, states on oath that he belonged to a party of emigrants going from the State of Iowa to the State of California; that said party consisted of nineteen persons, viz., Edward A. Miltimore, his wife Catharine, and nine children, of whom the deponent is one; William Harrington and child, and whose wife is affiant's sister; Alford Hill and wife, Myron Clim, Nathan Titus, Hiram Marsh and Franklin Hubbard; that they started on the journey in May, 1859; that they parted company with Lorenzo Suber at the last crossing of Sweetwater, and went on the new road known as "Capt. Landers' Wagon-road." About 23 miles west of Fort Hall, this affiant was driving along the team in the rear wagon in the train, when he saw three men; they were Indians, or white men disguised as Indians, on horseback, coming up toward the train of wagons, through the loose stock of the company; that his brother James was driving on after them, when the cattle took fright and ran off on the hills at the side of the road; when this took place, his brother William, who was driving the wagon and team next before witness, stopped his wagon to see what was the matter, when affiant drove on and passed him. His father was with the wagon of William, walking by its side—his mother and the small children were in the wagon. These three men were armed with guns; and coming on up to the wagons. Two of them rode up to and were looking about the wagons; the other, who was the largest man of the three, kept off more from the wagons. One of the two who were about the wagons said to this affiant, "Where are you going?" He replied, "To California." "No, you are not," said he. "Well," said affiant, "we started for there, anyhow." We soon came to where there were two tracks of the road separating for a little way, when the man that had spoken to me rode out on one of them a short distance and said to his companion, "There are no tracks going this way;" his companion replied, "Take the other road," which he did; these men spoke good English, there was no brogue on their tongues, and from hearing them talk he would judge them to be white men, while their dress and color denoted them Indians, except that the one who spoke to affiant had light brown hair, and several of the party had beards; one of them had a long heavy beard, that he particularly noticed; after passing along for a short distance one of the men gave a whoop, when others commenced coming in sight from each side of the road; affiant counted fifteen and did not count all of them; he supposes there were about twenty in all; as they approached, one of the three got off of his horse and appeared to witness to be fixing the girth of his saddle, and remounted again, but very soon dismounted again on the side of his horse opposite to where his father was walking by the wagon, and taking aim on the shoulder of his horse, fired off his gun at father; but witness don't think the ball struck him, when another one of them fired and father fell; our party soon scattered and eleven of us made our escape; this affair took place on the 31st day of August, near sundown; three days after this we came up with a party of United States troops, under command of Lieut. Livingston, and he sent a party of nine persons to aid others to escape if they yet lived; when they returned they reported that they had found five dead bodies, and three are missing, including his mother; his sister, about five years of age, was found with her legs and ears cut off, her eyes gouged out and scalped. And further saith not.

D. R. ECKELS,
Chief Justice of Supreme Court.

The foregoing is sufficient to convince any person who knows anything of the Indian character that the perpetrators of the deed were white men, for all know that Indians neither have light brown hair, long beards, nor do they speak the English language when conversing among themselves; nor do they show themselves when they intend attacking a company until they commence the attack.

The First District Court, Judge ECKELS presiding, commenced its session at Nephi, fifty miles south of here, on Monday, the 22d of August. On the Judge's approach, at least three-fourths of the male population of the town fled, some say to avoid being summoned as jurors, and others, to avoid having juries summoned for them, or in other words, to avoid being arrested for their crimes. It matters not which of the versions may be true; it is sufficient to say that they cannot explain their absence by saying that they were afraid of the "soldiers," as they did when they fled from Judge CRADLEBAUGH at PROVO.

The Court continued in session for two weeks, and during that time DAVID MACKENZIE, who forged Quarter-Master's checks on the U. S. Treasury, of which I gave you an account, was tried, convicted and sentenced to two years confinement in the Penitentiary of the Territory, and fined fifty dollars. The grand jury returned indictments against fourteen persons for murder, but none of those charged were in custody, nor can they be found by the Marshal.

The three prisoners who were confined in the guard-house here, charged with murdering the PARRISHES, were in consequence of orders from Washington delivered to the custody of the Sheriff of Utah County, Mormon, for safe keeping, and were by him suffered to make a voluntary escape.

Nothing was done in regard to the Mountain Meadows massacre, in consequence of the refusal of Mr. WILSON, the Attorney for the Territory, to have summonses sent for witnesses before the Court commenced, although he well knew that it was three hundred miles to the scene of the massacre, and that no officer could go there, hunt up witnesses and return with them during an ordinary term of Court.

On the sixth day of the session, the Grand Jury made a presentment setting forth in detail the difficulties that Federal Courts have to encounter in Utah; it is too lengthy to admit of being copied, but the principal facts set forth are that there was no money furnished to defray the expenses of the Courts, either by the Federal Government or by the Territory; that the fee allowed jurors by the Territorial Statutes was seventy-five cents per day, and witnesses fifty cents per day, while board cost them two dollars; that the inhabitants would furnish them but few accommodations, even at the most exorbitant prices, a majority of their number having to sleep in corralls upon the ground and in the open air; that they could get but few witnesses before them who would testify; that there was no money in the Territorial Treasury to pay even the meagre fees that were allowed them, or to pay the Marshal for arresting and keeping prisoners, summoning witnesses, or for his attendance upon Court, and that it was the same in relation to all the other officers of the Court, and the presentment closed by praying the Judge to discharge them from further attendance. The Judge considered that to retain them longer would be punishing the innocent for the crimes of the guilty, and they were accordingly forthwith released; after which, the civil business having been disposed of, the Judge sat for several days as a committing magistrate, and during the time had two or three very important witnesses before him, inasmuch as the Mormon Church has labored hard to avoid the responsibility of the Parrish murder.

ALMA WHITLOCK was brought before the Court on an attachment for contempt, in failing to appear as a juror, and upon his oath said that he had been a member of the Mormon Church, and had undergone an ordeal (meaning the endowment,) by which he had sworn to shield and protect the Saints whenever in his power, and under that oath he was disqualified as a juror, and if he in any particular was faithless toward a Saint, his life would be forfeited, and he did not believe the Mormons would hesitate to execute the penalty.

These facts need no comment from me when I have made a statement of things as they actually exist; my duty toward the public has ceased; it is for others to suggest and adopt a remedy.

Judge SINCLAIR started for the States, via California, by the last mail. I presume that Judge CRADLEBAUGH will join him at Carson Valley, and they will travel home in company. Mr. Secretary HARTNETT also set out for home last week, and the week before Mr. WILSON, the Attorney for the Territory. Mr. WILSON travels in company with Mr. HOOPER, the Mormon delegate to Congress. I learn that Dr. FORNEY, Superintendent of Indian Affairs, will also start for home in a few days.

Gen. STANBAUGH, the newly-appointed Surveyor-General, arrived at the city a few days since. I know not what political bearing his appointment is intended to have, but I hope that he is sent out here as the initiative to a change of policy in the Administration. He succeeds a good man, and I hope will prove himself equally worthy. I am told that he says the Administration knows nothing of the actual state of Utah affairs. RICHARD.

Improvement in Business in California—The Steamship Competition—An Earthquake—Mining News—Miscellaneous Intelligence.

From Our Own Correspondent.

SAN FRANCISCO, Friday, Oct. 7, 1859.

I am glad to be able to announce a moderate improvement in business since the steamers left on Wednesday last. Still, such large quantities of goods are sold constantly under the hammer, at a sacrifice, that the jobbers are doing far less than they should at this season of the year. The auctioneers are reaping a harvest from our glutted markets; and so it would continue to be for some time to come.

Great interest is manifested here in relation to the respective passages of the two steamers which left us on the 5th for Panama. Of course everybody expects the old line, with the Golden Gate on this side and the Baltic on the other, to outstrip the Cortez and its consort of the opposition; but the question is whether the former shall make the trip in five days less time than the latter, or seven. Any number of bets have been made that the Baltic would land her passengers in New-York in nineteen days, and that they would thus be in advance of the passengers by the other line at least five days. [The Baltic arrived at this port on the evening of Oct. 24, bringing the California mails of Oct. 5. The Northern Light arrived on the 28th; four days afterwards.—ED. TIMES.]

We had a fine shake of an earthquake a little after noon on the day on which the steamer left. The shocks (for there were two) were preceded by a dull rumbling sound, like the mutterings of distant thunder. The oscillation was from North to South, and the motion was more violent than that of any similar phenomenon noticed here during several years past. In some instances it shook the plaster from the walls of dwellings. In another, it rang the bell of an engine-house, and the crockery and glassware generally was set rattling at an alarming rate. People rushed out of high buildings to the streets, officers, lawyers, jurors and spectators suddenly vacated Court-rooms, and here and there some luckless hombre, more frightened than the rest, might have been seen legging it for the Plaza, where he would be safe from falling buildings and free from all danger, unless the earth itself should open and swallow him. This grand shaking up which Dame Nature gave us all, still forms an interesting topic of conversation.

Previous reports of the richness of the recently discovered diggings at Mono Lake, in the Walker River region, are confirmed. As an instance, one party of three men made $3,000 in four weeks, and then sold out for $4,000. The diggings are situated about six miles north of Mono Lake, upon two long gulches running into the lake. Some smaller gulches, tributaries of these, are also rich. A small ditch has been cut, bringing water to the diggings, and a larger one has been started by another company, who are about commencing a saw-mill for the purpose of getting out lumber for fluming. The prospect is that there will be a flourishing town there next Spring, though the season is too far advanced for any further emigration this year. A report had reached Mono, just previous to this party leaving, that new diggings had been discovered still further south, near the head of the San Joaquin. So says the Mariposa Star.

A correspondent of that journal, who claims to write from the ground, says: "One claim sold to WHIPPLE & Co. for $4,000; one, for half share, to J. SHILLING for $1,000. Many more, for sums varying, for shares only, from $500 to $1,500. Mariposa has a large representation here, mostly doing well; among whom are L. VINING, MR. DYE and others. A large scope of country is open to the adventurer, and Mono is destined to be a great centre whence will radiate more discoveries. The ditch, when enlarged, will bring water into this locality in abundance, and next Spring the word will be, Ho! for Mono Diggings.

The miners are averaging $12 per day to the hand, under very unfavorable circumstances of a small quantity and bald quality of the water. The season is expected to close by November, when all mining will cease until April.

Officer BENJAMIN BROWN, of the San Francisco Police force, was severely injured the other day by a Mexican horse-thief named FRANCISCO BARROS, whom he attempted to arrest at the Catholic Mission, near the city.

A bold robbery was perpetrated recently in Amador County, at a secluded place. RAYMOND & CRABEAUX, Frenchmen, own a ranch on Silver Lake, in that county, where they spend their Summers in ranching stock, making butter, &c. On the night of the 26th of September, RAYMOND was alone in his cabin, his partner being in Jackson, on business. About 10 o'clock, he was somewhat surprised at receiving a visit from four good-looking, well-dressed Americans, who entered the house and asked for some supper. He not having anything in the house at the time, so informed them. They then asked if he had milk; if so, they had crackers, and could make a meal of these. He gave them milk, and they regaled themselves well, and conversed freely for about an hour. Then, at a signal given by one of the intruders, four revolvers were leveled at him, and he was informed that they were "on it," and wanted his money. He gave them $75, all he had at the time. The polite robbers were not satisfied, but required more; and, in order to force him to disgorge, they put a rope around his neck, threw it over a beam in the cabin, and threatened to hang him. He protested in such an earnest manner, however, that he had no money, that they took the rope from his neck. He was then put on a horse, tied hands and feet, taken to where the stock was, when the robbers told him their horses were worn out, and they wished to exchange them for fresh ones. It being dark, they were unable to lasso the animals at the time, so the robbers made a large fire and sat around it until morning, when they lassoed a mare and a mule, being all they could secure. They then bade RAYMOND good morning, after inviting him to go with them and be a gentleman, and rode off, leaving three horses in place of the two they had taken.

Gov. WELLER has pardoned C. J. FARLEY, who was convicted in Sutter County, January, 1857, of passing counterfeit money, and sentenced to the State Prison for ten years.

JOHN MCCAFE, convicted at the District Court of Nevada County, October Term, 1858, of murder in the second degree, and sentenced to the State Prison for ten years, has also been pardoned.

On the 1st October three men were buried by a cave in the Eureka claims, on Juan Hill, Nevada County. Their names are PLATT, SULLIVAN and CHANDLER. The first two were taken out dead, and the third was very seriously injured.

LATER FROM OREGON AND WASHINGTON.

We have dates from Portland, Oregon, to the 26th September. News from Lieut. MULLAN's Fort Benton Overland wagon-road party had been received, announcing satisfactory progress. On the 4th September the road had been completed to a point on the Bitter-root Mountains, 21 miles (through heavy timber) beyond Cœur d'Alène Mission. Lieut. MULLAN hoped to reach the summit by the 20th of the month, and the Bitter-root River, in St. Mary's Valley, by the 15th October. The line of the road has been examined as far as the summit by Mr. SONON, who reports a good route. The work is now done in sections, and, when finished as far as the Bitter-root River, may be regarded as completed—for beyond, to Fort Benton, few obstacles to a practicable wagon-road will be met. The Indians are now friendly, and, apparently, have come to look upon the road with favor, and as an advantage to them.

Company D, First Regiment of Dragoons, under command of Lieut. ROBERT JOHNSTON, reached the Dalles on Sept. 21, from Walla Walla, in seven days' march. This company takes post at Fort Dalles, under instructions from Department Headquarters. Lieut. D. MCM. GREGG is attached to this company.

Democratic State Convention at Lawrence—Nomination of Sam. Medary for Governor.

From Our Own Correspondent.

LAWRENCE, Tuesday, Oct. 25, 1859.

The Democratic State Convention met in this city to day, G. H. FAIRCHILD, of Atchison County, presiding. The Committee on Credentials reported that at least twenty-one Counties, nearly one-half of the organized portion of Kansas, was reported to be represented by parties not living in the County. Leavenworth, Lecompton, and other towns, had sent large lobby delegations, and these parties were taken up and converted into Delegates for all the parts unrepresented in the proper way.

A spicy debate took place on a motion to defer the appointment of delegates to the Charleston Convention. The Convention was nearly equally divided on this subject, but the motion to defer was finally carried by 35 ayes to 28 noes, and this acknowledged triumph of the Buchanan wing was hailed with loud acclamations. An unsuccessful effort was then made for the appointment of a Committee on Resolutions, but after discussion it was concluded that the Tecumseh platform, formerly adopted, was a sufficiently decided expression, and the motion was not urged.

The Convention then proceeded to ballot for a candidate for Governor—Messrs. HOOPER and STANLEY being appointed tellers. The parties in nomination were Gov. MEDARY, H. P. DENMAN, of Leavenworth, and C. K. HALLIDAY, of Topeka. The choice fell upon SAM. MEDARY at the first ballot, the vote being as follows: MEDARY, 43; DENMAN, 27; HALLIDAY, 10. Gov. MEDARY was therefore declared unanimously nominated, and a committee of three appointed to notify him of his nomination. He soon appeared in the hall and made a very neat speech, in which he said he thought the Republicans as well as Democrats had better vote for him, and they would if they knew their own interest. He took great credit to himself for what he had accomplished in restoring peace to Kansas, and referred to the late fatal scene at Harper's Ferry as in some way a catastrophe that he had rid Kansas of by driving away one of the rebellious leaders.

The State ticket was then completed, as follows:

Lieutenant-Governor—JOHN P. SLOUGH, of Leavenworth.
Secretary of State—A. P. WALKER, of Lecompton.
State Auditor—J. K. GOODIN.
Attorney-General—MR. THURSTON, of Allen County.
Superintendent of Public Instruction—S. MCGILL.
Chief Justice—Judge WILLIAMS.
Assistant Justices—ROBERT B. MITCHELL and SAMUEL A. STINSON.

After the transaction of some important business, the Convention adjourned sine die. RANDOLPH.

ATTEMPT TO KIDNAP A NEGRO.

The Leavenworth Times, Oct. 25, says:

"Some days since, the house of Mr. LAWRENCE, a farmer in Salt Creek Valley, was entered about 11 o'clock at night, by a party of six men, disguised in different ways. Their object was to carry off a negro man, who had worked for Mr. L. during the past six months, on pretence of his being a fugitive slave. Through the determined resistance of Mr. LAWRENCE and the opportune appearance of a hired man with a shot gun, the ruffians concluded "that discretion was the better part of valor," and left. Evidently they were acquainted with the premises, for three of them entered the old man's bed-room before the house was alarmed. They searched the house and were abusive, producing no warrant nor anything else to justify their conduct. Suspicion rests upon some Pro-Slavery neighbors of the farmer, as, in spite of disguise, the voice of more than one was recognized. The plea of the negro being a fugitive was acknowledged by one of the party to be a mere sham."

LAW REPORTS.

The Record Commission.

CLAIM ON THE PRINTING CONTRACT.

The People ex rel. McSpedon & Baker vs. The Board of Supervisors.—This was the return to the writ of alternative mandamus issued to the defendants requiring them to show cause why they should not pay the relators for work and labor done, and to be done, under a contract made with the relators by the Commissioners of Record to do printing.

The case has been frequently reported, and now came on before Justice INGRAHAM, on a motion to quash the return of the respondents and for a peremptory mandamus, on the ground of insufficiency.

The return set forth that at the time of the issuing of the writ, the relators did not have a certificate of the Commissioners of Record that they were entitled to the sum of $47,131 97, because the certificate was not signed by William Minor, one of the Commissioners; that the respondents had no money to pay the sum demanded, and could not pay it without a second tax levy; that the relators had not earned either the sum then asked, or the further sum of $193,000, claimed under a contract.

This return was deemed evasive and insufficient by counsel for relators, who now moved that it be quashed for that, and the further reason, that the return was argumentative, in that it went on to show that the relators were not in possession of a certificate entitling them to the money, because Minor had not signed it.

Counsel for the respondents objected to the motion to quash, on the ground that the motion could only be made on demurrer, and the time had elapsed for putting in a demurrer. The Court ruled that if the notice of motion to quash was served before the expiration of the usual twenty days, the objections of counsel could not prevail. Counsel admitted that the notice was served before the expiration of the time, but contended that the motion itself must be made within the time, and excepted to the ruling of the Court.

Counsel for the relators then contended that inasmuch as the return did not controvert the statement of the relators, inasmuch as it did not dispute the contract, and that as the contract was authentic and binding, the return was evasive and insufficient. Judge Edmonds argued these points at great length, and was responded to by counsel for respondents, who contended that if the Commissioners of Record had made improvident and extravagant contracts for spending the people's money, they could not be compelled to recognize the contract as binding, or to pay the money demanded by virtue of it.

Mr. Brady spoke with great power in support of the motion, contending for the same propositions submitted by Judge Edmonds. Decision reserved.

J. T. Brady and Judge Edmonds for plaintiffs; A. R. Lawrence, Jr., for defendants.

The John-street Church.

DECISION OF THE COURT—REPORT OF THE REFEREE CONFIRMED.

The Beekman Fire Insurance Company vs. The First Methodist Episcopal Church et al.—This cause came up on exceptions to the report of a Referee in a foreclosure case. The plaintiffs sued as assignees of the bond and mortgage. The assignment of the bond and mortgage to the plaintiff was on its face an absolute assignment, without reservation, condition or trust. Under such assignment, and as the absolute, unconditional owner and holder of the mortgage, the plaintiff commenced this action of foreclosure, by the decree in which the whole amount remaining due and unpaid on the mortgage was to be paid to the plaintiff out of the proceeds of the sale of the mortgaged premises—the defendants, the First Methodist Episcopal Church, making no defence, and putting in no answer.

The proceeds of the sale of the mortgaged premises were more than sufficient to pay the mortgage and the costs of the action.

After decree and sale, the defendant, the Church, applied to the Court for affirmative relief, setting up that the assignment to the plaintiff was not, in fact or in equity, absolute, but that the mortgage was assigned to the plaintiff as security for moneys paid and advanced, and to be paid and advanced by the plaintiff, to and for the said Church; and that the whole amount, which had been so paid and advanced by the plaintiff, was much less than the amount remaining unpaid on the mortgage, for which the plaintiff has got the decree.

This being admitted by the plaintiff, and the parties conceding that the plaintiff had so paid and advanced, at different times and in various sums, to the amount of $8 603 66, prior to May 28, 1857, and the further sum of $1,236 60 on the 11th May, 1858, these amounts, with interest, were ordered by the Court to be paid to the plaintiff out of the moneys arising from the sale, and the plaintiff claiming the TIN—The movements have been restricted, though prices have not varied materially.

TOBACCO—The demand for crude is moderate at previous figures. Manufactured is in fair request, being partially cheaper. Sales during the month of October: 19,655 packages in 1859, and 17,412 packages in 1858. Stock Nov. 1, 43,623 packages in 1859, against 29,271 packages in 1858. The MESSENGER BROTHERS remark that: "Prices for the best and medium brands of 5s and 8s have receded from 1 to 3 cents ℔ lb., hence the market cannot be quoted as firm. The present stock of medium and better grades is well assorted, and very ample for the advanced period of the season, while inferior qualities below this standard are not in large supply. Grocers purchased with great moderation, and generally hold very light stocks. The active business season is drawing to a close; we must therefore look for a corresponding diminution in sales. The stock has slightly reduced in the last month."

NEWS OF THE DAY.

The steamship Bavaria, from Southampton on the 18th ult., arrived at this port yesterday afternoon. Her advices have been anticipated.

Our special correspondent on board the Great Eastern sums up his reasons for concluding that the monster ship fails to establish any new facts in the philosophy of Ocean Navigation. Premising that the cost of locomotion depends on the amount of power required, and on the economical generation and application of that power, he inquires how much horse power the Great Eastern demands. Her size, he asserts, does not give her any appreciable advantage over other vessels, although she gains a little from her sharpness. Then, as her boilers and engines are precisely of the old sort, it is impossible that there should be much economy of fuel. It seems to be also an established fact, that her sails cannot assist her as much as they would were she exclusively a screw steamer, as they interfere to some extent with the free operation of the paddle-wheels. At high speed they would be of little assistance. He regards her, however, as to some extent a mechanical success, and believes that, if she can be filled, upon long voyages she will pay, although the anticipated economical advantages may not be realized. Our correspondent at the time of writing was still of the opinion that the vessel would leave for this country on the 1st inst. The official action which fixed this as the day of sailing had not been reversed. Prince Albert and Prince Napoleon had both been indulging their curiosity in visiting the vessel.

The British steamer Karnak, from Havana on the 25th, and Nassau, N. P., on the 27th ult., arrived at this port yesterday. From the latter place we learn of disasters to American shipping during the late stormy weather. The New-York bark, Augusta Mayhew, ran ashore on New-Providence Island, but after taking out her cargo she was not found to be seriously injured.

Our San Francisco correspondent writes, under date of Oct. 7, that business in California was improving, but that the market for various descriptions of goods continued heavy. Great interest was manifested in the competition between the rival lines of steamships, and wagers had been laid in San Francisco upon the faster passage of the Baltic. An earthquake occurred on the California coast on the 6th October, more violent than had been known for many years. Later dates from Oregon and Washington also reach us, but the news is unimportant.

We have received dates from Utah to Oct. 5, with full particulars of the horrible massacre of emigrants by the Indians, previously reported. The savages attacked an emigrant train on the night of the 2d September, at a point twenty-five miles distant from Fort Hall, and killed five persons, four of whom were members of a family named Miltimore, from Buchanan County, Iowa. Three others are missing. The survivors of the party reached Camp Floyd in safety. Developments had been made before the Federal Court in Utah, of Mormon complicity in the Parrish murder. Robberies and outrages continued to be frequent occurrences in the Territory.

The Kansas Democratic Convention, for the nomination of State candidates, met at Lawrence, Oct. 25. Sam. Medary was nominated for Governor on the first ballot. Judge Williams was nominated for Chief Justice of the Supreme Court. A brisk debate took place on a motion to appoint delegates to the Charleston Convention, but the Convention finally voted to defer the appointment.

The Charlestown trials reached another stage yesterday, in the conviction of Edward Coppie, upon the same charges as those contained in the indictment against Brown. The prisoner's counsel moved as before for a suspension of judgment. The Court having decided not to grant the suspension in the case of Brown, that prisoner was invited to speak before the sentence was pronounced. Availing himself of the permission, the sturdy old convict declared that while he had no fault to find with the trial, which was as fair as he had any reason to hope for—and while he admitted the correctness of the testimony, yet it was due to himself to assert that he was not guilty of either treason, exciting negro insurrection, or of murder, none of those crimes having been contemplated in his designs. He had simply proposed to rescue slaves and expedite them to Canada. He closed with a justification of his action on philanthropic grounds. The Court then declared its sentence to be that Brown should be hung in public on the 2d day of December proxime. The prisoner exhibited no emotion as the fatal form was recited.

Of the State Election, which occurred yesterday in Maryland, we have meagre returns. In Baltimore the day was universally devoted to riot and bloodshed. The so-called American Party, otherwise the ruffians who rule the city, surrounded the several ballot-boxes, and by threats, or actual violence, prevented the friends of order and reform from depositing their votes. By noon, the impossibility of participating in the election became apparent to the Reformers, and they shortly after abandoned the field to their enemies. The fighting was not restricted to any Ward of the city. In all but one the most flagrant acts of violence and brutality were enacted; men were wantonly shot, others stabbed, and others so seriously beaten that their lives are despaired of. Mr. Adam B. Kyle, a respectable merchant, was killed, receiving a pistol shot in the brain; and Mr. Wm. P. Preston was so beaten with a bludgeon, that he lies in a critical condition.

The work of correcting the City registers for voters was completed last evening, and the result shows that there has been a general interest exhibited to have the names of electors placed upon the records of each voting district in accordance with the requirements of the law. To afford the public an opportunity of judging how far the new regulation has been complied with, Mr. Superintendent Pilsbury gave the order to have the total number of voters registered in each Ward reported at head-quarters. The order was promptly executed, as far as the police force was concerned, and, with three or four exceptions, all in the Fourteenth Ward, the required information was as promptly given.

The motion to quash the return put in by the Supervisors, to the mandamus sued out by the printers employed by the Record Commissioners, to enforce payment for work done under their contract, was argued before Justice Ingraham, of the Supreme Court. No decision was rendered. In the habeas corpus sued out in behalf of Richardson, who stands accused of embezzlement, in instigating Little, the clerk of Winslow, Lanier & Co., to give him money of his employers, Judge Ingraham has directed further evidence to be received on the point of Little's age. If he is upwards of 18 he would be guilty of embezzlement. Richardson is to be remanded.

Hon. Thomas Corwin, Member of Congress elect of Ohio, delivered a long address to an audience of about two thousand persons at Musical Hall, Brooklyn, embodying his views of the doctrines of the Republican Party. He argued that the irrepressible conflict between free and slave labor originated with the South Carolina nullification, counselled obedience to all law, including the fugitive slave law, and defended Webster, Clay and Fillmore from the charge of being favorable to slavery because they recognized and acted on their duty as sworn officers of the Government.

At the meeting of the Board of Education a communication was received from the Sixth Ward School Officers stating that in order to avoid discord they had directed the teachers not to read the Bible in the schools under their control, and asking that the salaries of the teachers be paid, with the exception of one, which they desired should be left as a test of the law before the Courts. A desultory discussion ensued, and finally the President declared the resolution to pay the salaries not properly before the Board, as it had not been referred.

The citizens of the Eighteenth Ward who support the Hon. George Opdyke for State Senator from the Sixth District, and Col. John S. Cocks for Assemblyman from the Fourteenth District, held a mass meeting at the Demilt Dispensary, corner of Twenty-third-street and Second-avenue, last evening. Speeches were made by Benjamin Warden, Esq., Hon. James Brooks, Chas. G. Murch, Esq., and Geo. G. Bellows, Esq., and resolutions indorsing the nominations were adopted.

In the Stock Exchange Market yesterday, there was an improved tone to the dealings, and a fairly distributed demand for Shares and Bonds, at an advance on the former of about ½ ₩ cent. In Money rates there was no alteration. The supply continues free for Discounts and on Demand Loan. Since the Boston mail, there is not much doing in Foreign Exchange.

Low and Medium brands of Flour were in good demand at unchanged prices. Wheat was in fair request at steady rates. Corn, Rye, Barley and Oats were rather lightly dealt in. Cotton was inquired for and was firm. Provisions, Sugars, Rice, Naval Stores, Metals, Tobacco and Whisky were moderately sought after. Coffee, Fish, Molasses and Whisky were inactive. Hay, Manilla Hemp and new Hops attracted considerable attention. The freight engagements were restricted, with 449 vessels of all classes in port.

The Live Stock markets continue to be oversupplied. The receipts of live animals of all kinds designed for slaughter at the regular City yards, for the week ending yesterday, number: Beef cattle, 5,579; veal calves, 817; sheep and lambs, 14,765; swine, 19,970; also of milch cows 214—a total of all kinds of 38,345. At yesterday's general market, beef cattle sold fully ½c. ₩ lb., estimated dressed weight, lower than last week's "ruinous rates;" the best animals offered going at scarcely 10c., and the poorer grades all the way down to 4c. Veal calves of good quality sold about as well as last week, but "kittens" and large grass-fed calves were abundant, and sold very low. Sheep and lambs were also in excess of the demand, and about 25c. per head lower than last week. Swine are very abundant, fairly glutting the market, and causing a decline of near 1c. ₩ lb, live weight. The best corn-fed hogs were scarcely bringing 5½c. ₩ lb.

John Brown's Speech.

If any doubts still linger in the minds of thoughtful men as to the real character and aims of John Brown, or as to the best way of dealing with his crime, they must surely be resolved, on the reading of his brief speech, made before sentence was passed upon him by the Court, and published in our columns to-day. Since mad Lord George Gordon fanned the Protestant fanaticism of London into flame, 80 years ago, and for three days held the metropolis of England at the mercy of a frantic mob, the civilized world had seen no outbreak of individual passion against organized order at once so grotesque and so alarming as John Brown's émeute at Harper's Ferry. And certainly, since the crazed Scotch nobleman pleaded his right to do the Lord's work in his own way at whatever cost to all the world beside, there has been no such calm assumption of the "sword of Gideon" as John Brown's clear, downright, and fearless proclamation of his convictions and his aims in reply to that dread and formal query of the Law: "Prisoner at the bar, what have you to say why sentence of death should not be passed upon you?"

But Lord George Gordon, though the mischief which he set on foot was far more formidable than the actual work achieved by Brown, was a coward at heart as well as a fanatic. John Brown is as valiant in soul as he is vagrant in mind. After a trial which might well have shaken the nerves of a man in the flush of health and strength, and which he was forced to undergo while racked with pain and faint in every limb from many and serious wounds, with the moral weight pressing upon him by day and night of a deeply-cherished purpose desperately wrecked, and with the fatal verdict of a Jury ringing his death-knell in his ears, John Brown speaks for himself and for the cause to which he had given his life and the lives of his children, as calmly, as openly, and as earnestly as he could have done in the supreme hour of victory itself. It can hardly be possible that any man, whether at the North or at the South, however deep his detestation of the crimes for which Brown has been by the law condemned to suffer, should read these words of the brave old fanatic without a glow of half-compassionate admiration for the strong and sterling qualities of the nature which loads their every syllable with honest force. The case of the South and of the Union would be really perilous were the Americans become incapable, through sectional passions or local fears, of doing justice to this brave old man's unshrinking faith in what he deemed his duty, and to the courage with which he bears that faith aloft to-day in the shadow of the scaffold, as he has borne it through border raids and the hot strifes of civil war. If the statesmen who profess to love the union of these States, and the citizens, Northern and Southern, who are so eager to uphold it, will but take pattern of unflinching firmness and out-spoken singleness of purpose from this devotee of Abolitionism, that "irrepressible conflict," of which we hear so much, will hardly be left to run its course unchecked.

But if John Brown has all the moral qualities of an ancient covenanter, he shows the mental features, too, of his prototype. The blood of his sons slaughtered (let our Southern kinsmen for their own honor and the country's peace remember this) by madmen foraying the land for Slavery, and the meditations of many years given to the passions of religion and liberty, have gone up into the brain of this old man, and made him intellectually blind to all the ordinary checks and balances by which human decisions are modified and human actions determined. As a psychological study, John Brown's speech is one of the most curious on record. In the face of his own admission made on the trial, that he was the author of a certain "Provisional Constitution" found among his papers, and that by this Constitution his proceedings were to be regulated, Brown earnestly, and with altogether unmistakable sincerity, declares that he never intended to take life or to destroy property in carrying out his plans. "My design," he says, "was to free slaves, not to incite them to rebellion or insurrection." Then he appeals with a simplicity almost touching in its naïve disregard of the probable opinions of his hearers, to his past experience in Missouri, to show that he had reason to think himself able to carry off a great many slaves from Virginia to Canada without "snapping a gun." In his Provisional Constitution he had, nevertheless, made elaborate arrangements for organizing an army for the "execution of enemies" in certain contingencies, and for the "confiscation of their property." His men were all to go armed, and his abundant store of Sharp's rifles, ammunition, pistols, and weapons of various kinds, might certainly be construed, without any extravagance of inference, to mean that if guns were to be snapped at all during this singular Exodus, Capt. Brown did not mean the snapping to be confined to his "enemies" the slaveholders. The enormous and obvious inconsistency between the whole scheme of his plot, with the incidents inevitable to its developement, and the aversion from the shedding of blood which all his prisoners agree that Brown manifested during the hours of his "brief authority" at the Armory, and which he now so strongly reiterates, does not seem to have so much as occurred to him. Clearer proof could hardly be asked of the utterly refractory state of his intellect, or of the extreme unwisdom, to call it by no harsher name, of treating such a man as the agent of a party, or making him the unconscious martyr of a cause.

Brown's speech classifies him at once, and in a class of one. He is a fanatic, sui generis. He shows neither the sophistical grasp of mind nor the malignant unfairness of temper which would be necessary to rank him with agitators of theoretical Abolitionism like Wendell Phillips; nor the astute coquetry with explosive passions which alone could affiliate him with Republican Party leaders. He is simply John Brown, of Kansas; a man logical after the narrow fashion of the Puritan individualism; a law unto himself, and a believer with all his might in theological abstractions as applied to human society and politics. He hates Slavery, and thinks all slaves ought to be free. That anybody should think it wrong for him, so hating Slavery and so thinking, to attempt to set free the greatest possible number of slaves in the shortest possible time; or that any organization which may appear to him necessary for carrying out this object should be regarded as treasonable, John Brown cannot understand now that he is to be hung for it, any more than we believe he understood it when he made up his mind to set about the work, and others flocked after him, who now, less brave than he, endeavor to throw their own more rational guilt upon his shoulders. We own ourselves at a loss to see in what way the execution of such a man can be so brought about that it may not be converted to the inflammatory purposes of sectional partisans with whom John Brown has plainly nothing in common; and who will be as eager to make him a profitable martyr when dead, as they are to repudiate him while he still lives.

The Election in Baltimore.

The election in Baltimore has resulted very much as we ventured to predict yesterday, in bloodshed, disorder, and in the triumph of the "Plug Uglies." The Reform Party, after a feeble resistance, quitted the field and withdrew their ticket, leaving some dead and many wounded behind them. The rowdies have been victorious at all points, having carried out to the letter the programme announced on their placards and "transparencies" at the mass meeting on Wednesday evening last. The votes "have not been counted;" the Reformers have been "dared to vote," and in most of the Wards have not "dared." In short, the ruffians of Baltimore, having challenged the respectable and orderly portion of the community to an encounter, have met them hand to hand, and routed them, and are at this moment as complete masters of the city as ever the Goths or Vandals were of Rome. Early last evening we were informed that nine men had been shot, and one was already dead; that in "the Third Ward the polls were blocked by rowdies, and the Police were doing nothing;" in the Tenth Ward "the Reformers had been driven off;" in the Fifteenth Ward "a man was shot dead," and his brother, "coming to his assistance, was dangerously wounded;" in the Fourteenth Ward "there was a desperate struggle;" in the Sixteenth "a man badly beaten," and a Dr. Richardson, a leading Reformer, pursued through the streets by the chief of an obscure Club, armed with a drawn sword, and that on his taking refuge in a shop it was stormed; that the First, Second, Fourth, Fifth, Eighteenth and Twentieth Wards were in possession of the rowdies all day, and that in the last-named they were using artillery; and finally that William P. Preston, one of the candidates for Congress, was lying in a hotel, "having been badly beaten about the head with a billy," and the Reformers, "finding it impossible to do anything, had all withdrawn."

When we commented a few weeks ago upon the remarks of Judge Stump, of the Baltimore bench, in which he stated his inability to detect much difference between the culpability of persons who commit rape or robbery on board a steamboat, and that of the captain who admits them on payment of their fare, in ignorance of their propensities, we were charged by one of the Baltimore journals with a desire to draw away the trade of that city by exaggerating its disorders. We were also assured by one or two correspondents, whose lot is cast in that quarrelsome locality, that we were entirely mistaken in our estimate of its morals and manners, and that, taken for all in all, it was as desirable a place of residence as any in the Union;—that like other cities, rowdyism had of late years grown rather rampant, but that a Reform Party had sprung up, which was speedily going to set everything to rights.

We knew then, however, and we know now better than ever, that it is the elections, and the elections alone, which can indicate the value of Baltimore reform movements. Until the time comes for going to the polls, the rowdies appear to treat the decent inhabitants with a sort of contemptuous indifference. They let them prattle and resolve at public meetings, talk glibly of law and order, and denounce anarchy and violence as vehemently as they please. No amount of patriotic spouting makes the "Plug Uglies," or "Red Necks," or "Thunderbolts," a whit less truculent or blood-thirsty than before, or saves a single victim from their knives and pistols either by day or by night. The reformers have never proposed to improve the police in any other way than by a reform of the municipal administration, to be brought about by voting at the polls; but as long as the rowdy organizations could hold the polls against all comers, reform was impossible. The strength of the two parties has once more been tested, and the rowdies and ruffians are once more triumphant. The Sheriff did nothing, the police did nothing, and the result is that the reformers have done nothing.

How long this state of things is to last remains to be seen; but thus much is certain: that as long as the result of yesterday's proceedings remains unchanged, ruffianism rampant in the streets, respectability cowed and suppliant in the houses, no citizen of Baltimore ought to show his face in any part of the Union without paying patriotism and courage the compliment of an unmistakable blush of shame. There are in Baltimore at this moment thousands of men, well-born and well-bred, and well-educated, who would not brook a look of insult from any man living, and who plume themselves, above all things, upon their personal honor. But if we know anything of what honor means, no man in the City, who looks out of his window upon the armed bands of blackguards, who, as the telegraph informs us, were last night parading the deserted streets in triumph, without determining to abate the nuisance at all hazards, can fairly ask the world to give him credit for possessing it. We can forgive people for calling themselves patriots while succumbing to a political faction or a foreign enemy, and waiting patiently for better times; but we know of nothing which can palliate the base submission of a large, wealthy metropolis to bands of drunken thieves, pickpockets, burglars and assassins, the refuse of its jails, and the spawn of its slums and brothels.

It is impossible to acquit the Mayor and other officers of Baltimore from the severest censure in regard to these outrages. They had full warning that they might be expected. The respectable portion of the inhabitants had been alive to the danger, and had tried in vain to arouse the city officials to the necessity of taking measures to ward it off. They obstinately refused, and treated the remonstrances of the citizens as an impertinent interference with public affairs. They made no provision for the emergency; and when it came, were either powerless in the hands of the mob or winked at excesses intended to perpetuate their political sway. In either case, they merit the most emphatic censure of every lover of republican freedom.

Siege of the City Treasury—The Attacking Phalanx.

Amidst the disheartening records of public measures and public interests always tried by and often sacrificed to the standard of party union, it becomes an agreeable study for the admirer of civic economy to analyze the votes and motives of those ten members of the Board of Aldermen who have distinguished themselves by always voting together on one particular class of measures; while just equally divided—five on each side—on all other measures appearing destitute of the cohesive element. We look for subtle reasons of patriotism to explain their wonderful unanimity when the ayes and noes are called on questions having private interests behind them;—yea, and doubtless if we look long enough, and probe deep enough, we shall be able to discover very weighty and solid considerations.

It is a fact known and recognized that Aldermen Henry W. Genet, of the Seventeenth Aldermanic District; Francis I. A. Boole, of the Twelfth; Michael Tuomey, of the Sixth; Thomas Stephens, of the Fourth, and Thomas McSpedon, of the Sixteenth, were each and all regularly nominated by Democratic Conventions, and regularly elected by Democratic voters. They are true and active party men, prompt in assuming all Democratic responsibilities, unrelaxing in their hostility to all abstract Republican theories; and certainly these five are not the least influential members of the Board in which they have seats.

In like manner it may be stated that Aldermen John H. Brady, of the Fifth Aldermanic District; George Starr, of the Seventh; John Lynes, of the Tenth; James Owens, of the Fifteenth, and Henry Smith, of the First, are collectively and individually pure, prominent and potent members of the Republican organization; and that their votes in the Board of Aldermen count for just as much as the votes of their five Democratic brothers. United these Ten are nearly irresistible, forming a decisive majority of the Board for all common occasions; and when it becomes necessary to rope in a few more members, for the purpose of overriding a veto by a two-thirds vote, or abolishing the necessity for a contract with the lowest bidder by a three-fourths vote, we commonly find that our ten Aldermanic engineers rise up to the magnitude of the motive and succeed in accomplishing their object.

But the refreshing feature of their operations is the surprising unanimity which they evince in voting for particular Resolutions. Carefully read their proceedings and analyze their votes for the past nine months, and there will be no difficulty in foretelling how they will vote on every future measure having a large private interest to be subserved at the expense of the public. On all questions in which the public only are concerned, they will stand five against five, wrangling, spouting, gesticulating, and bandying fragrant epithets, with a zeal and grammatical recklessness to delight the hearts of their respective constituencies. But let any one of the Ten introduce a resolution to have a sewer built for the benefit of private property, "the City paying two-thirds of the expense," or to lease a valuable pier at a nominal rent, or to have a contract made with a specified party, to do certain specified jobs at specified prices, and you may, in their own vernacular, "go your pile on it" that the remaining nine will lend their most sweet voices to mulct the City in the amounts proposed.

Last week we had occasion to notice the attempt made by these gentlemen, with some few outside Aldermen, brought in for special duty, to establish, in the case of the Fifteenth Precinct Station-house, an authority in the Common Council to override that provision of the Charter which orders all work, exceeding $250 in value, to be duly advertised for ten days, and given out on contract to the lowest bidder. Our Aldermanic Decemvirate, as we learn, were highly and justly indignant at the boldness—we may say the contumacy—of that exposure; but, nevertheless, they did then and there back down and retreat from their previous assumption of having power, by a three-fourths' vote, to order the Head of a Department to cause a job to be done by a specified jobber at a specified job-price; and, as a graceful and safe means of covering their discomfiture, they then and there ordered, by a three-fourths' vote, that the work should be done, not by a specified jobber at a specified price, in violation of the Charter, but by the Head of the Department having legal charge of the business. This was a practical concession of our whole argument—all we asked, all we demanded; and the policy of abusing our logic, while obeying its force, is not obvious outside of the hazy atmosphere in which the Fathers of our City dwell.

In that article we stated that behind the precedent to be established by the success of the Common Council in the case of the Fifteenth Precinct Station-house, there stood a mighty array of civic iniquities, ghastly as the armies of disease rallied behind King Death, all of which would depend for success and fruition on the ability of the Common Council to override the united resistance of the Mayor and Street Commissioner. If the power were established or confessed in the test-case first tabled, that three-fourths of the Common Council could fix prices, make contracts for jobs, and specify the favored jobbers, irrespective of the civic Heads of Departments and the provisions of the City Charter, then we should soon have seen the work of building a new gate to the Croton Lake reservoir taken out of the hands of the Croton Board, Broadway ripped up and paved with Belgian pavement at prices about equivalent to a dollar an inch, and contracts made with such moderate bidders as Charles G. Waterbury, William B. Reynolds, Thomas K. Downing, Waltermeyer, Conover, Fairchilds and Johnston for cleaning the streets, repairing the roads and avenues, and keeping piers, wharves and parks in order. In fact, the whole programme of the "awful contracts," running for five years each, with the awful contractors, could, under this precedent, have been securely and successfully put through.

In the Board of Councilmen the Aldermanic Decemvirate has worthy allies, enlisted under the same great and shiningly attractive banner, and coöperating in all things needful with the distinguished Ten whose names have been set forth in these previous paragraphs. In the Councilmen, too, will be found the same delightful unanimity, irrespective of party ties, on the same class of cases which awaken the fraternal emotions of the Board of Aldermen. Perish the bonds of political union, when the great claims of private benevolence and the desire of doing good to individuals is at stake! Much as we may differ on the dry theories of public policy, it is bliss to know that in our City Councils there is at all times a perennial bond of cohesion—varieties of checks moderating the fury of partisan rancor, and arguments of a sterling nature which at once address themselves to the affections and understandings of our City Fathers. The whole subject is now undergoing thorough investigation, and the forthcoming volume of Mayor Tieman's Vetoes and Messages will do much to aid the civic student, and clear up all the mysteries now hanging, cloud fashion, voluminous and impenetrable, round the City Hall. As we shall have a new Corporation Counsel before many months, it is well to have the whole matter investigated.

The Alleged Conspirators.

We appreciate fully the pressure which constrains our Democratic brethren to make the most of the Harper's Ferry affair just on the eve of the State election. We are not in the least surprised at their love of the Union, nor their detestation of any project, however foolish and contemptible it may be, for compassing its overthrow. This would be natural enough under any circumstances. But their fierce determination to fasten the responsibility for this outbreak upon prominent members of the Republican Party finds its sole and sufficient explanation in the emergency of the pending election. It is an old and established custom of political parties to spring some fearful mine of iniquity upon their opponents just on the eve of an important contest. The Glentworth explosion came off just before the election of 1840, and was expected to alarm the people into reëlecting Mr. Van Buren. The Roorback disclosures, at a subsequent date, were of the same sort.

In this case, although we do not suppose that the Democrats had any hand in getting up the invasion at Harper's Ferry, or that old John Brown consulted their interests in fixing the time for it to come off, it certainly happened at a very fortunate moment, and may have an important effect upon the popular vote. After the election is over it may be possible to fix attention for a moment at least upon some of the absurdities into which the Democratic journals have fallen, and some of the injustices which they have allowed themselves to perpetrate in this connection. And it may be well enough meantime to remind the Journal of Commerce of one or two points which seem to be forgotten in the following paragraph:

"The statement of Forbes that he explained fully the whole matter to Senator Seward, who expressed regret that he had been told of it, makes that gentleman morally responsible for the acts of these 'madmen,' whose madness he has in no wise attempted to restrain, but, on the contrary, has urged on by his incendiary speeches."

Col. Forbes, it should be remembered, was particeps criminis with Brown, and separated from him merely on the ground of his private interests. He visited Senator Seward and others, in pursuit of money which he claimed to be due to him from their political party, and he now reveals the facts which he has given to the public, partly to revenge his losses and his griefs. It is only fair, therefore, to bear in mind that he is not likely to tell any more than will serve his purpose. Perhaps, if he would state fully what he did say to these gentlemen, and what they said and did thereupon, he might relieve them from some of the odium which he has managed to throw upon them.

Meantime it should be borne in mind that his interview with them was in March, 1858,—that Brown was then in Virginia, and that "he was going to put his plan into execution." "Every day," says Mr. Forbes, "I was expecting to hear of Capt. Brown at Harper's Ferry." He waited at once, therefore, upon the gentlemen whom he has named—and here is his own account of the effect of his revelations:

"I consulted two Abolitionists of very high standing, and one of them, Dr. Bailey, of the Era, became alarmed at the mischief which Brown would bring upon Abolitionism and himself. Dr. B. consulted others, who urged on me to stop Brown. My reply was, 'I cannot stop him, for I have no influence with his backers; stop him yourselves.' * * That the impression of my earnestness might be more felt, I sent copies to all the parties concerned, and by hammering and hammering on the same spot I did stop them in their career of folly. Who besides Dr. Bailey aided me in this work I am not very sure, except that one was a gentleman of great influence Eastward, and with whom I had two or three interviews. To him Dr. Bailey communicated the matter; I did not tell him."

In one of his previous letters he mentions Senator Seward as one of those on whom he called and exposed the whole affair. According to Col. Forbes, therefore, his revelations to these gentlemen were made a year and a half ago,—when Brown was on the spot, and when he expected "every day" to hear of him at Harper's Ferry. They were all alarmed, and implored him to stop the movement;—he refused, and told them to stop it themselves It was stopped, and nothing more was heard of it for eighteen months. Even Forbes himself says he heard nothing more of it during all that time, and supposed the whole project to be dead and buried.

Is it not probable,—setting all prejudice and party feeling aside,—that Messrs. Seward, Bailey, and the others of whom Col. Forbes speaks, did stop the movement the moment they heard of it? Somebody did: Col. F. says he did not; and attributes the result entirely to the men whom he succeeded in enlisting in opposition. What reason is there, then, for attributing to them a result which they warded off for nearly two years,—from which they themselves had the most to lose, and with which they are not shown, by a particle of evidence, ever to have had the slightest connection? Perhaps the Journal will give us an answer after the election.

The Haytian Ex-Emperor and the Jamaica Negroes.

The Ex-Emperor of all the Haytis has abdicated his powers and retired into private life, honoring the city of Kingston, in the island of Jamaica, with his ex-imperial presence. Driven to the last extremities, the portly Faustin was indebted to the magnaminity of the General by whom he was overthrown, for permission to leave the country; and it is scarcely necessary to add, that he was taken off and carried to Jamaica by one of Her Britannic Majesty's vessels, which seem to find abundant employment in carrying disappointed American fillibusters and black monarchs from place to place in the Carribean Sea. At Kingston, Soulouque was received, not with the usual welcome of indifference for which British soil is proverbial in case of political refugees, but with considerable excitement on the part of the population of Kingston, one-half of whom are as black as Faustin himself, three-eighths being colored, and about one-eighth white, pur sang. The black and colored inhabitants of Kingston were delighted at the opportunity of seeing a sable Emperor, and they turned out en masse to enjoy the pleasure.

It will not, however, be out of place to look a little into the feelings of the Kingston negroes who thus numerously signalized the landing of Soulouque on British soil. Persons who are not acquainted with that peculiar class of people might suppose that they were induced to the demonstration which hailed Soulouque either by sympathy with his career, regret for his downfall, or glee at the extinction of his tyranny. The character of the Blacks in the Island of Jamaica, however, forbids belief in either sentiment.

This is not the first time that Monarchy has "called" in the City of Kingston. Some years ago, his Majesty the King of Mosquito—a real Simon-pure King—visited the Island of Jamaica and was féted and made much of in every possible way. Then, if ever, the negroes of Kingston might have manifested African or Creole pride. There was a man almost of their race and entirely of their color, addressed by all the whites who officially approached him as "Your Majesty." But the blacks did not care for black majesty. They voted it droll, and made fun of it, and yelled when it rode through the streets, and laughed in its face when it went to the theatre. They thought a negro King a laughing-stock, and they so treated the sable monarch.

They will not be likely to act very differently now. Fallen Majesty will not be apt to excite much sympathy with a class of people whose interests, being almost entirely animal, may be said to be wholly selfish. They will therefore care no more for Soulouque than they did for King William of Mosquitia—and will probably regard the one as about as good a joke as the other.

Meanwhile, Soulouque himself will, in all probability, take a "pen," as a country-house is called in Jamaica, keep his horses, lay in a stock of good wines, command, thereby, an entrée into the highest circles of society in Jamaica, live like a real old Haytian gentleman, and regard, with supreme contempt, the ignorant and half-savage "niggers" whose names fill the poll-books of that happy country. The more he looks down upon them, the more they will be likely to look up to him; so that if Soulouque makes up his mind to drop the imperial dignity altogether, purchases a few of the best racing-horses in the country, and drives a handsome "turn-out," he will live far more happily than he has ever done before in all his life. The only drawback upon his felicity will be the fearfully bad French which he will have to listen to when the "nobs" of the island visit him, which they will assuredly do, and the obligation upon him to force his struggling sentiments through the broken English peculiar to Haytian exiles. Abundant largesses to the Catholic churches of the island will secure to him the affection of a certain number of the population, and the rest will love him more and more in proportion as he spends more and more money. But beyond this, there is nothing to be expected from the recent demonstrations. Soulouque, Emperor, will be of much less account in Jamaican eyes, than Soulouque, rich black man, spending his money freely, and so keeping up the "respectability" which the Jamaica negro believes to belong of right to the position of a "colored gentleman."

Improvement in Telegraphing.

We had an opportunity of examining, yesterday, an invention which can scarcely fail to prove of very great importance in transmitting messages by telegraph. At present, as every one is aware, a message can only be sent as rapidly as one operator can spell the words and record them, letter by letter, in the characters used. If the rate of transmission is to be increased, it must be by multiplying the number of wires, of instruments, and of operators. One can only transmit messages as rapidly as one person can write. The invention to which we refer consists in applying the operation of printing to the process of transmission. The message is first put in type,—the letters being substantially the same as those now used. These types are placed in very simple metal cases,—each being about a foot in length. These cases are then placed upon the instrument in such a way that, on being carried forward by a revolving band, the projecting points of the type strike a metallic plate and complete the electrical circuit, precisely as the same result is effected in the ordinary method by the touch of the operator's finger; and the letters are recorded with corresponding rapidity at the other end.

The machine makes very nearly the same change in telegraphing which the invention of printing made in the multiplication of manuscripts. At present a message of ten thousand words over a given line can only be transmitted as fast as one person can record the successive letters. By the use of this instrument, a hundred persons can first put it in type, and then the whole can be transmitted in less than an hour. It thus multiplies the power of the telegraph immensely, and this of itself will tend very greatly to increase the amount of business which will be transacted through its agency. The process of setting the type is very simple and easily learned, and requires much less skill than the ordinary kind of type-setting. The invention seems to us one of special importance, and calculated to effect a complete revolution in the business of Telegraphing. It is the work of a gentleman named Bradley, who has a working model open to inspection at his rooms in Tammany Hall.

Amusements.

Academy of Music.—Donizetti's opera of the "Favorita" was given here, last night, with an unusually powerful cast, and with a degree of success which will, we think, insure its repetition. Mme. Gazzaniga, whose voice has gained in strength and freshness, and whose method is rapidly improving, was thoroughly admirable as Leonora. It has always been one of her most successful impersonations, and a fitting vehicle for the infinite womanhood which this great dramatic artist always infuses into her rôles. Signor Amodio recovered some of his former popularity as Alphonso, and sang so discreetly that it was a pity he did not know all the music. Signor Junca was the Balthazar.

The event of the evening was of course the début of Signor Beaucardé in the part of Fernando. The antecedents of this fine artist justify the confidence of the management in his success,—a confidence which it must be confessed has been amply demonstrative and painfully explicit. For many years Signor Beaucardé has maintained a leading position in the best theatres of Italy, and more lately has sung in Paris. He is without doubt one of the best educated tenors we have ever had in this country; his style is grand and manly; his method perfect. These specialties are sources of never-ending pleasure, and must, of their own merit, insure a success. For the rest, Signor Beaucardé has been so long before the public that his voice is somewhat worn. It was peculiarly hard and unsatisfactory in quality last night, owing to a severe cold from the effects of which he is said to be suffering. Despite this drawback his success was encouraging, and will, we have no hesitation in saying, rapidly increase. He is a great artist, notwithstanding his very exaggerated and absurd interpretation of Spirito Gentil.

On Friday "Lucrezia Borgia" will be given, and we shall have an opportunity of hearing Signor Beaucardé in another part.

THE TAMMANY RATIFICATION MEETING.

A Quintette by the Members of Mr. Buchanan's Cabinet.

Views of Secretaries Cass, Cobb, Toucey and Thompson on the Present state of Politics.

The subjoined letters were received by the Tammany Committee, but in the crowd of oratory on Tuesday evening, no opportunity was found to have them read. The names and position of the writers may entitle them to the space here assigned them:

FROM THE SECRETARY OF STATE.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Oct. 31, 1859.

GENTLEMEN: I have just received your letter, and hasten to say to you that my public duties here prevent me from accepting your invitation to attend the Democratic mass meeting proposed to be held at Tammany Hall to-morrow evening. But, though absent, I shall not the less participate in the patriotic sentiments to which you so forcibly appeal, and which I am sure will find a heartfelt response in that time-honored room. Often has it witnessed, and I was present at them almost half a century ago, glorious exhibitions of attachment to the Union and the Constitution, and of a determination to protect them, but rarely, if ever, when they were menaced by greater dangers than now, or where the blessings they bring with them called for more gratitude to Providence or more good will to men.

I am rejoiced to perceive there is a prevalent impression among the Democracy of your State that it is time their internal dissensions were terminated, and that harmony of action should take the place of those discordant views which have divided them, and which have done so much injury, not to New-York only, but to the country. Firmly convinced as I am, that the preservation of this Union depends upon the ascendancy of the Democratic Party, I look forward to its united action as the sheet anchor of our political safety.

And the recent lamentable occurrences at Harper's Ferry, to which you refer in such just terms of condemnation, teach a most impressive lesson, which should be written in living characters upon the history of our country. The sanctity, not merely of Constitutional rights, but of private life, has been invaded, and violence and murder have been carried into a peaceful community, and the American people have learned, with equal indignation and horror, the deeds which marked that bloody day, and the motives avowed for this disregard of the most sacred laws, both human and divine. There is a spirit abroad which threatens the most disastrous consequences to our country. It is time that every true man were prepared to resist it. And if resistance is not speedy and effectual, this glorious fabric of freedom, the work of our fathers, will be demolished, and our sons will be delivered over to the evils of anarchy or of despotism. There is one safe rule of action, which, if adopted and followed, will save us from the perils that surround us. It is to let each State of the Union manage its own internal concerns in its own way, subject only to the provisions of the general Constitution. But if this golden rule of public intercourse is to be sacrificed to political purposes, or to fanatical impulses, we shall soon add another to the number of Free States, which have proved themselves unworthy of the blessings bequeathed to them. May there be no such calamity in store for us.

I am, gentlemen, respectfully, your obedient servant,

LEWIS CASS.

To NELSON J. WATERBURY, EDWARD COOPER, JOHN VANCE, Esqs., Committee.

FROM THE SECRETARY OF THE TREASURY.

WASHINGTON, Monday, Oct. 31, 1859.

GENTLEMEN: I should be much gratified to attend your meeting on Tuesday evening next, if I could do so with propriety. It will, however, be out of my power, as I shall be detained at Washington by official engagements.

It is a source of gratification to every Democrat in the country that the divisions which have so long distracted and weakened the Democratic Party of New-York, have been finally healed.

Your friends throughout the country now indulge the confident hope—that the days of your dissensions and defeats have passed, and that you approach the era of cordial coöperation and new Democratic victories.

I am happy to see from your note of invitation, that you do not under-estimate the importance attached to the recent treasonable outbreak at Harper's Ferry. That infamous outrage has produced a deep excitement in every section of the Union, and it is very natural that it should have done so. If the parties immediately engaged in it were alone responsible for their conduct, it would be sufficient cause for the alarm and anxiety which have been everywhere manifested. Its importance, however, is greatly magnified when we come to consider the causes which have led to this bloody tragedy. For years the public mind has been kept in a constant state of excitement on the Slavery question. Confined at first to weak-minded and fanatical men, it was a matter of little moment, and only excited attention when reckless and ambitious spirits sought to appropriate to political and party purposes the passions and prejudices which false philanthropy and wild fanaticism had engendered in the popular mind. It has been the constant aim and study of that class of politicians to poison and inflame the public mind on this exciting subject. The people have been taught by these men to regard the institutions of fifteen of the sovereign States of the Union as moral and political stigmas upon the national character.

The laws which our legislators have passed to enforce the recognized rights of the citizen, have been held up to public execration, and the Constitution which our revolutionary fathers bequeathed to us has been denounced as "a covenant with hell, and a league with the devil." When men of high political position—Senators and Representatives in Congress—Governors and Judges—the recognized leaders of a political organization which struggles with some hope of success to obtain the control of our General Government, and which has already possession of most of the non-slaveholding States of the Union, continue day by day, in season and out of season, by public speeches and lectures in the halls of State and National legislatures, upon every forum, and through every channel through which the public mind is to be reached, to denounce the institution of Slavery as it exists in our country, as a curse and a violation of the laws of God and man, and to hold up to the people of the Southern States as an unchristian and degenerate race, unworthy of their social, political and religious associations; when such men, possessed of rank, power and influence, have planted deep and strong in the hearts of the people of the North the conviction that between them and their brethren of the South there exists, in fact, an "irrepressible conflict," which can only terminate with the social and political degradation of the one or the other—when such is the state of things in the country it should not be a matter of surprise that there should be found men like the actors in the Harper's Ferry tragedy, who feel called upon to give practical effect to the doctines and teachings of those from whom they have received their lessons of moral and political instruction.

I will not stop to discuss the question how far these political leaders, Senators and Representatives, are identified directly with the recent outbreak at Harper's Ferry. It is enough to know that the prominent actors in that bloody scene looked to them as their friends and supporters.

When money was wanted, the appeal was made to these men to supply it. When their plans were discussed, and complaints of bad faith were to be made, it was poured into the ears of Senators and Representatives, who would now shake off the wholesome associations which by these teachings and doctrines they then encouraged. A generous charity must save the leaders of the Black Republican Party—whose names are implicated in this nefarious transaction—from the guilt of personal coöperation. But there cannot remain a shadow of a doubt of the moral responsibility which attaches to the men whose inflammatory appeals and traitorous doctrines have maddened these murderous instruments into their work of blood and treason.

It was not so in the earlier days of the Republic. Then, our fathers lived together as brethren; because they felt and acted as brethren ought to feel and act. The love and fraternal regard which the common struggles of our Revolutionary fathers had deeply implanted in the hearts of the people is fast giving place, under the teachings of this new political sect, to hatred and bitterness.

It requires no prophet to foretell the future of our country, if, unrestrained by a wise and wholesome public opinion, these men are permitted to go on in their work of folly, madness and treason. With a Constitution honored, reverenced and obeyed, and a Union, resting for its solid foundation upon the hearts and affections of a grateful and fraternal people, we have before us the promise of a brighter future than was ever vouchsafed to any people.

Let us not, however, deceive ourselves by looking too confidently upon the bright side of the picture. To realize it we must arrest and roll back the waves of sectional controversy which have brought us to the verge of dissolution and ruin. This growing spirit of sectional hostility must be rebuked. Abolitionism, whether it present itself in the garb of religious bigotry or political power—whether preached from the pulpit by BEECHER and PHILLIPS, or taught by SEWARD and GIDDINGS—or sought to be carried out by the bloody hands of BROWN and ANDERSON—no matter in what form or by whom sustained—must be strangled and crushed if we are to live together in peace and harmony as members of the same political brotherhood.

In a Government like ours, which rests upon public opinion for its greatest security, which scorns to look for its support and perpetuity to mercenary armies and mere brute force—our appeal must be made to the calm and intelligent mind of the people. Since the occurrences to which I have referred, the people of New-York and New-Jersey will be the first called upon to speak. In view of the deep feeling which pervades the public mind of the whole country, it is not strange that the result of your pending elections should be looked for with far more than usual interest. I trust that the conservative and patriotic masses of New-York and New-Jersey will realize their responsibility, and send to their brethren of every section of the Union words of hope and encouragement. I am, very respectfully, yours, &c.,

HOWELL COBB.

To Messrs. NELSON J. WATERBURY, EDWARD COOPER, JOHN VANCE, Committee.

FROM THE SECRETARY OF THE INTERIOR.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 31, 1859.

GENTLEMEN: Your polite letter of the 29th inst. was not received until to-day. You invite me to attend and address the Ratification Meeting to be held at Tammany Hall on to-morrow; and you remark the importance of the occasion "will justify the sacrifice of any personal inconvenience" which my attendance might involve.

I feel and admit the importance of the occasion. My heart is with you, and most ardently do I desire the success of the Democratic ticket.

But, gentlemen, certain startling developments of a late date will give to the result of your approaching elections a peculiar significance. A large party exists in the Northern States,—it is in the ascendant in your own State, and is now struggling to maintain its power,—whose only bond of union is hostility to a property held in the Southern. This property was held in all the States except one at the time of the adoption of the Federal Constitution. The leading men of this party may succeed in clearing themselves from all direct connection with the late abortive attempt to incite the slaves of Virginia to insurrection, murder and plunder. But still it is impossible to deny that this attempt is the legitimate, practical working out of the doctrines and teachings of those who speak for the Black Republican Party.

The question which is now forced upon the people of the North—which they cannot evade if they would, and which it is the part of true manhood to meet squarely and point blank—is, Does there exist such a conflict between the institutions of the North and the South that a longer peaceable union is impracticable—that, indeed, there can be no peace till the one or the other shall go down?

Will the majority of the intelligent and order-loving people of New-York affirm this opinion, or principle?

The people of the South are, and of right ought to be, interested spectators of this canvass; they will wait for your verdict, and con it over when heard with the deepest solicitude. By the people of the South, I mean the white people. I mean those who had the power to contract, and did contract with the white people of the North, who then, under similar circumstances, alone had the power to contract, "to form a more perfect union, establish justice, insure domestic tranquility, provide for the common defence, promote the general welfare, and secure the blessings of liberty to ourselves and our posterity."

The question of fidelity to this compact is now transferred to the people of the North, and they must determine the question for themselves, whether they wish and intend to keep it in good faith, and with a hearty good will; and I doubt whether any citizen whose lot has been cast in the South should interfere in any way with them in making up their decision.

In this view, while I feel the greatest anxiety for the perpetuity of the Union, and consequently for the success of the Democratic Party, perhaps it may be well that circumstances beyond my control will prevent my acceptance of your invitation.

I am, with great respect,

Your obedient servant,

J. THOMPSON.

To Messrs. NELSON J. WATERBURY, EDWARD COOPER, JOHN VANCE, Committee.

FROM THE SECRETARY OF THE NAVY.

WASHINGTON, Monday, Oct. 31, 1859.

GENTLEMEN: I have received your note inviting me to address, to-morrow evening, at Tammany Hall, a grand mass meeting of the Democracy of the City of New-York. I regret that I shall not be able to be there. The election now at hand will speak trumpet-tongued to the people of the United States. One result of it will usher in a brighter day than has recently dawned upon us; because it will be one of peace, of harmony, of security, of fraternal relations, and will be the harbinger of national prosperity and power and greatness, far eclipsing the past; while the other result will only forbode intestine discord, civil commotions, bloody insurrections, and finally the rupture of the ties which bind together this confederacy of States. It is impossible that the agitation which has embroiled us for years past, and is now being developed in some of its most startling consequences, should not rouse the public mind to decided action upon it, and become the great issue before the country. Such is now emphatically the case in the powerful State, which has the largest interest in the perpetuity of our institutions, and the result will justify those, who, in the darkest crisis, still retain an abiding confidence in the intelligence and patriotism of the people. I am, gentlemen,

Very respectfully yours, &c.,

ISAAC TOUCEY.

Messrs. NELSON J. WATERBURY, EDWARD COOPER and JOHN VANCE, Committee.

FROM THE SECRETARY AT WAR.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 1, 1859.

GENTLEMEN: Your favor of the 28th ult., inviting me to attend and address a mass meeting of the Democracy of New-York, at Tammany Hall, this evening, was not received until yesterday, too late to answer by the afternoon mail.

In reply, I beg to assure you, gentlemen, of the very great pleasure it would afford me to be able to attend this meeting, but the nature of my public duties, at this period, is such that it would have been impossible for me to accept your polite invitation, even if it had reached me in time.

Very respectfully and truly yours,

JOHN B. FLOYD.

Messrs. NELSON J. WATERBURY, EDWARD COOPER, JOHN VANCE, Committee.

From Havana and Nassau.

ARRIVAL OF THE KARNAK—DISASTERS TO AMERICAN SHIPPING.

The British screw-steamship Karnak, Capt. BROWNLESS, from Havana, 25th Oct., and Nassau, 27th, arrived yesterday morning, at 5 o'clock.

On the night of Friday, 27th, she encountered a severe gale, accompanied by thunder and lightning and very heavy rain, the wind from East. Since then had strong Northerly winds and clear weather.

In Havana, from the 22d to the 25th Oct., there was a constant heavy rain.

The British brig Alma left Nassau, Oct. 26, with Col. O'HALLORAN, lady and suite on board.

The following account of disasters to American shipping is from the Nassau Guardian of Oct. 19:

"The American bark Augusta Maykew, THORP, master, from New-York, bound to Havana, with an assorted cargo of merchandise, got ashore at Brown Rock on the 6th inst., at 10 P. M. After making every exertion to get the vessel off, and failing in the attempt, the captain took the assistance of wreckers, who labored four days to extricate the vessel, being oblired to take out the cargo. Capt. THORP arrived here on the 16th, and has had a survey on his vessel, which is found to be very little injured. He is now taking in cargo to proceed on his voyage. Salvage on vessel and cargo has been settled by mutual agreement for £14,500. Wreck-master's fee, £20."

The Guardian of the 15th says:

"The American brig Umpire, of Boston, HIGGINS, master, from Philadelphia, bound to Kingston, (Jamaica,) with provisions, arrived at this port this morning, in distress. On the 4th inst., in lat. 27° N. and long. 71° W., they experienced a hurricane, when, to save the vessel, they were obliged to cut away the backstays of the foretopmast, which carried away also the head of the foremast, the maintopmast, mainboom, and everything attached."

Among the passengers yesterday, for Havana, in the Empire City, was Miss Ada Clifton, of Laura Keene's Theatre. She goes, in company with her father, for the benefit of her health.

Catarrh!—Having disabused thousands who believed this disease to be incurable, and having demonstrated the fallacy and delusion of medical books, in their pathology of Catarrh, and evinced to physicians their error, in believing and asserting that "Catarrh could not be cured," it is only necessary further to say, that I shall add other evidence in confirmation of these facts, by my treatment of any applicant. I cure Catarrh! Any one can obtain a pamphlet (free) accurately defining the disease. Hours, 8 to 12 A. M., and 1 to 5 P. M. R. GOODALE, M. D., No. 863 Broadway, New-York.

DYSPEPSIA! DYSPEPSIA! DYSPEPSIA! WHAT IS IT? HOW CURED?—Dyspepsia is our national disease—weak stomach, feeble digestion, distress after eating, costive habit, bilious condition. How many suffer from it, and its attendant symptoms of low spirits, bad taste, coated tongue, obstupified head, and attacks of headache! Yet how few know how to cure it! Generally, because the bowels are constipated, resort is had to cathartics or laxatives. But such a condition was never cured by cathartics, whose only office is to weaken the digestion, and impair the integrity of the entire assimilative system.

But HUMPHREY'S HOMŒPATHIC DYSPEPSIA PILLS—a simple medicated sugar pill—have cured hundreds of the worst and most obstinate cases. This is done simply by improving the tone and restoring the integrity of the digestive organs, from which result good appetite, regular habits and clear head, and buoyant spirits. Such a medicine is a gem, and only requires to be known to be appreciated.

Price 25 cents per box, with directions. Six boxes, $1.

N. B.—A full set of HUMPHREY'S HOMŒPATHIC SPECIFICS, with Book of Directions, and twenty different remedies, in large vials, morocco case, $5; do. in plain case, $4; family case of 15 boxes and book, $2.

CHAMPAGNE WINES, FROM BINET, FILS & CO.

TO THE PUBLIC:
We feel ourselves flattered by the preference accorded our house by Messrs. BINET, FILS & CO., in the appointment as their sole agents in the United States and the Canadas, for their celebrated original Green Seal Golden Spray, and Champagne des Dames Wines; and, in presenting the same to the American public, we are confident that the discrimination of American connoisseurs and the impartiality of the public will justify us in the statement that we present a superior quality of wine, as pure and as elegant as any in the market, at a price placing it within the means of all who may desire a perfect wine. The indisputable test is in the taste. These Champagne Wines of Messrs. Binet, Fils & Co. are free from all adulteration, made upon the extensive estates of Messrs. Binet, Fils & Co., at Reims, in France, and under their immediate supervision. Delicious, sparkling, refreshing and brilliant, having a fresh taste in the mouth, and not producing headache or feverish excitement when drank freely. We receive our shipments regularly from Messrs. Binet, Fils & Co., and offer the same to the trade at prices that cannot fail to give a decided preference when the quality is considered. A large stock always on hand.

BINET, FILS & CO., Reims.

The great reputation and popularity which our Champagne Wines have enjoyed for many years in France, England and Russia, and the urgent request, so often expressed by our American friends, that we should present the same to the American public, has induced us to forward a stock, and to establish Messrs. TUAILLON HAVARD & CO., of New-York, our sole agents in the United States and the Canadas for the sale of the same, and we flatter ourselves that the excellent taste and judgment of American connoisseurs will award to our Binet Fils & Co. Champagne a prominent position in the catalogue of wines celebrated for their superior qualities. We offer a pure and excellent wine, bright, sparkling, and possessing a fruity richness found only in a real grape wine. This Champagne enjoys a great reputation in Europe as an imperishment wine, and purchasers will observe that the medal of the Legion of Honor, awarded only by the Emperor for real merit and worth, is engraved on each label. No others are genuine.
Messrs. Tuaillon, Havard & Co. are our sole agents since Jan. 1 1859. BINET, FILS & CO.

HUNDREDS OF THE UNFORTUNATE are disappointed of a cure by not calling on DR. HUNTER at first, the Hunterian Dispensary, No. 9 Division-st., New-York City, established in 1834, for the Preservation of Human Life. PRIVATE CONSULTATION.—Dr. HUNTER has for thirty years confined his attention to diseases of a certain class, in which he has treated no less than fifty thousand cases, without an instance of failure. His great remedy, HUNTER'S RED DROP cures certain diseases when regular treatment and all other remedies fail; cures without dieting or restriction in the habits of the patient; cures without the disgusting and sickening effects of all other remedies; cures in new cases in less than six hours. It roots out the poisonous taint the blood is sure to absorb unless this remedy is used. It is $1 a vial, and cannot be obtained genuine anywhere but at the old office, No. 9 Division-st. Boot for nothing, that treats of the evil effects of early abuse and indulgence, is embellished with elaborate colored engravings, portraying every feature and phase of disease, exposes the fallacy of the ordinary modes adopted for the cure of local as well as hereditary maladies, and gives the only safe and infallible remedy for expunging every trace of the virus from the system.

MUSICAL.

THE DRIGGS PATENT PIANO-FORTE,
OR THE VIOLIN PIANO,
"The best Piano existing."
From the New-York Times.
We have now an instrument without an equal. All that was cumbersome has been done away with. The strain of the strings is brought to bear on the iron frame only, and the sound-board or tone magnifier is as detached and vibratory as it could be, merely because there is nothing whatever to interfere with its office. Simple as this construction may seem, it works an entire change in the sound-producing principle of the Piano-forte. It carries the instrument into the class of the violin—the most perfect, because the most responsive instrument in the world, in sustained passages, the vocal effect of Mr. Driggs' patent is wonderful; it can sing with a smooth delicacy perfectly unattainable on any other instrument. The gain of power is equally remarkable; an ordinary player obtains, with no exertion, the fullness of a grand Piano-forte.
Manufactured and for sale by the DRIGGS PIANO COMPANY, at the Music store of WM. HALL & SON, No. 543 Broadway, one block above the St. Nicholas.
JAMES F. HALL, Sec'y and General Manager.

CITY INTELLIGENCE.

THE WANTS AND WELFARE OF SEAMEN.—The Port Society of this City have issued a call for a Convention of Seamen's Chaplains, to be held in the Mariners' Church, on the corner of Madison and Catherine streets, on Wednesday, Nov. 9, at 10 A. M., for the purpose of "considering the best mode of advancing the temporal and spiritual interests of Seamen.' A large attendance of the Chaplains, and other friends of Seamen, is expected. Such a Convention is certainly very opportune, at the present time, as there are many important matters connected with their welfare that need to be agitated and discussed. Such are: The present system of advanced wages; the mode of shipping men; the relative position and duties of owners, officers and men; the helps and hindrances of those who are laboring to elevate and better the condition of the sailor, both physically and morally, &c. Other topics of interest will doubtless be suggested, and if no other good should be accomplished by this Convention, it will at least enable the ministers devoted to this work to come together, to compare notes, to canvass the different methods of accomplishing their work, to present some important statistical information, and, perhaps, to suggest some uniform plan of keeping the records of their labor, by which we may hereafter obtain a more definite idea of the amount of good resulting from Christian efforts in this extensive missionary field.

PARADE AND BANQUET OF THE CITY GUARD.—The City Guard, the Pulaski Guard of "twenty gold en years ago," and now Company C of the Ninth Regiment, (still, however, retaining the honored name of "City Guard,") had a gala day yesterday to do honor to its new Commandant, MANSFIELD LOVELL. A review and parade took place in the afternoon, the corps numbering eighty-five guns, and being attired in full Winter costume, overcoats, capes, and bearskins. After the parade a banquet, at the Metropolitan Hotel, superintended by Mr. WARREN LELAND, in person, and doing full justice to the resources of that vast establishment. Speeches were made by Col. VAN BUREN, Commandant of the Ninth Regiment, Capt. Lovell, Dr. Fisher, W. H. Draper, Lieut.-Col. Ferris, Alex. Henriques, Maj. Halleck, Lieut. Stone, and Charles H. Cooper. To the latter gentleman a large gold medal was presented by Col. Ferris, for his services as the recruiting sergeant of the Guard, for the past year. The City Guard never do things by halves, and their display of yesterday was quite equal to their well-deserved renown, and justified their motto: "Sans Peur et sans Reproche."

ANNIVERSARY OF THE NEW-YORK ACADEMY OF MEDICINE.—The Academy of Medicine convened, last evening, in the Ninth-street Church, to celebrate their anniversary. Dr. W. C. ROBERTS was the orator of the occasion, and delivered "An Eulogium on Medical Science." His discourse was a review of the improvements which have been suggested and successfully carried into practice in the Healing Art during the last three-fourths of a century. At its conclusion the Doctor was tendered a vote of thanks. The audience was large, and comprised a great number of ladies. Dr. WATSON, the President of the Academy, occupied the chair. He was assisted by Drs. BUCK and THOMAS. Drs. MOTT, FRANCIS, BENFORD, and others equally well-known, were in attendance.

CORONERS' INQUESTS.—GEORGE SEARLES, an Englishman, 30 years of age, committed suicide on Tuesday night, by hanging himself from the basement stairs of house No. 211 Seventh-avenue. Since deceased and his wife separated, three years ago, he has led an intemperate life, having been of late reduced to vagrancy. His remains were buried in Potters' Field.....MICHAEL MCGOWN, a pantryman on the steamship Ocean Queen, was drowned by accidentally falling into the river, at the foot of Beach-street, on Tuesday night. In each case Coroner JACKMAN held an inquest.....PAUL NEILSON died at Bellevue Hospital on Tuesday night, from the effect of burns received on the 17th ult. Deceased was sitting up with his sick wife, when his clothes caught fire from coming in contact with a stove. An inquest was held by Coroner SCHIRMER.

THE DELANCEY-STREET SHOOTING CASE AGAIN.—On the 17th ult., SAMUEL CHEEVERS was wounded in a Delancy-street porter-house, by a pistol shot discharged at him by JOHN CARPENTER. The dispute which occasioned the fight originated in a discussion about the disorderly proceedings at the Democratic State Convention. CHEEVERS at first refused to make a complaint against CARPENTER, and the latter was detained in custody on a charge preferred by WM. DUNN, a witness of the affray. Subsequently he was admitted to bail in the sum of $1,000. Yesterday CHEEVERS determined to prosecute the affair, and made charges against CARPENTER before Alderman BRADY, who fixed his sureties at $5,000.

AMERICAN GEOGRAPHICAL AND STATISTICAL SOCIETY.—At the November meeting of this Society, at their rooms in Clinton Hall, this evening, a paper on the present condition of Iceland, written by a native of that island, will be read. Measures will also be taken for holding a meeting in commemoration of the lately deceased CARL RITTER, the first geographer of the age.

DEATH OF CHARLES COBANE.—CHARLES COBANE, who was stabbed last Friday in an affray at the liquor saloon No. 220 West Sixteenth-st., died on Tuesday night at the New-York Hospital. Coroner SCHIRMER made preliminary arrangements yesterday for holding an inquest this morning at 9 o'clock. DONNELL, who is said to have inflicted the wounds, is in custody.

THE RUTGERS LECTURES.—Rev. HENRY WARD BEECHER will repeat his lecture on "Bargain Makers," at the Rutgers-street Church, this evening.

Fires.

FIRE IN FULTON-STREET.—About 7¼ o'clock last evening MARGARET WALKER, employed as a servant in the family of ISAAC HAVILAND, at No. 12 Fulton-street, accidentally upset a fluid lamp in a bedroom on the third floor of the house. Before the flames were extinguished the furniture of Mr. HAVILAND, on which there is no insurance, was damaged to the amount of $1,000. The stock of HARVEY & HAVILAND, tobacconists, who occupied the building No. 10, and part of No. 12, was damaged principally by smoke and water to the extent of $1,000. It is insured in the Excelsior, Relief, Metropolitan, Lenox and Market Insurance Companies. The building No. 12 is owned by EDWARD JONES, and suffered damage which $300 will cover. It is insured. The building No. 10 belongs to the Schermerhorn estate, and is insured but little. The stock of A. B. LUDLAM, grocer, who occupied the first floor of No. 12 was slightly damaged.

FIRE IN CANAL-STREET.—Yesterday morning about 7 o'clock, a trifling fire occurred at the Hoboken Ferry building at the foot of Canal-street, in consequence of a spark falling on the roof.

Police Reports.

EXCHANGING PERSONALITIES.—John BRADY alias Pigsey, was sent to the City Prison to await trial for the commission of a burglary. While in the van, on the way from the Police Court to the Tombs, he induced Francis Brady, who was sentenced for ten days as a penalty for having been drunk and disorderly, to assume the name and character of John Brady, the burglar, while the latter was to answer to the name and for the crime of Francis Brady, the drunkard. This ingeniously concocted plan was carried out at the City Prison, the burglar being duly ticketed for ten days confinement as a drunkard, and his fellow plotter going into a cell until it should be time to convey him to the Court of General Sessions to answer for the burglary. At the expiration of the drunkard's term John Brady was discharged, and the ruse was only discovered when Francis Brady, the obliging friend, was arraigned before the City Judge. The surprise of the witnesses in the burglary case was overwhelming when they saw the man against whom they were to testify; and as they could not identify him he was liberated. On Tuesday night the ingenious young burglar was arrested by officers Bigland and Wilson, of the Eleventh Ward, while he was running to a fire in Seventeenth-street, and the story of his escape became known, despite the attempts to suppress it. The prisoner was recommitted to the Tombs.

CITY GOVERNMENT.

THE COMMISSIONERS OF EMIGRATION.

ACCOMMODATIONS FOR RAILROAD AGENTS.

Mr. VERPLANCK presided at the meeting of the Commissioners of Emigration yesterday afternoon. The weekly report stated that 1,308 emigrants arrived at this port during the week ending Nov. 2, making a total of 66,592 since the 1st of January, against 70,525 during the same period last year. The receipts to Nov. 2 were $149,525 34, and the disbursements $153,625 47. Mr. JELLINGHAUS, from the Committee on the request of the Pennsylvania Railroad, for the purpose of having one of their German employes in attendance at Castle Garden on the arrival of the passengers consigned to them, presented a minority report in favor of granting the request. The report set forth the annoyance to which German emigrants are exposed on their arrival, and the advantage that would accrue from the proposed arrangement. The majority report against granting the request was adopted and the Board adjourned.

THE BOARD OF EDUCATION.

THE BIBLE QUESTION AGAIN—NO DECISION.

The first business before the Board of Education, last evening, was the election of a Finance Clerk in place of Mr. CLARK, resigned. Mr. GEORGE W. COOPER was elected on the first ballot.

A resolution was adopted, appropriating $2,500 to repair Colored School No. 2, in Laurens-street, which was injured by fire a few days ago.

The Sixth Ward School Officers sent in a communication, stating that they had, with a view to avoid any elements of discord, directed the exercises of the schools under their charge to be conducted as heretofore, without the reading of the Holy Scriptures. The officers asked, in the form of a resolution, that all the teachers of that Ward, whose salaries had not been paid, be paid, with one exception, left to form a case to test the question in the Courts.

Mr. FARR moved that the communication be referred to the Committee on Finance.

Mr. SUTHILL seconded the motion.

Mr. WATERBURY hoped the offer of the Sixth Ward School Officers would be accepted, as there was a doubt on the subject which ought to be decided by a legal tribunal.

Mr. FARR claimed that the "Bible Question" had become the law of the Board, and that, until the Courts decided adversely, was binding.

Mr. WATERBURY opposed the motion to refer, holding that it was only just and fair that the offer of the Sixth Ward should be accepted.

Mr. ADAMS did not believe the Board had violated any "sectarian law," and did not believe that the Bible was a sectarian book.

Mr. FAIRMAN thought it was necessary to maintain a consistent record. They had passed a by-law, and it was now asked of them to stultify their action.

Mr. E. C. BENEDICT observed that while they might concede that the law had been violated, he thought that some means might be adopted to alleviate any inconvenience entailed upon teachers. He thought it fair to suppose, without expressing any opinion, that the question was a doubtful one. Now, who was it that contested the matter? Was it those who said the question was under their control—the local Board—was that so? It was doubtful, he insisted, whether it was so. The teachers could not solve the doubt in the case. They were between two fires, with their bread depending upon each. What should they do? They said they obeyed the orders of those who had controlled them directly, for the last fifteen years. He would ask if the Board would really oblige all the teachers whose salaries had been stopped, to suffer, when they voluntarily offered to test the question? In regard to the question how they would act if the Courts decided in favor of the law directing the reading of the Bible, he had that opinion of the Board that they would not ask to have the money refunded which the teachers had earned. It was not a question of a school-book; it was a sort of moral exercise, with which to open the schools. The Board had not stated that the Bible was to be used as a school-book. Let the question be tried. It had been suggested that no legal steps had been taken yet. But it should be remembered that if the teachers had gone into Court without first asking the Board in a respectful manner, they would have gone in to Court with a prejudiced case.

Mr. GOULD opposed the acceptance of the offer of the Sixth Ward officers. The question, he thought, was a simple one. The gentlemen in the anti-Bible Ward said they would not comply with the law—so it was a mere question of disobedience. The Bible, in his opinion, ought to be read to every child. The State law and the law of the Board had said it should be done, and it ought to be done. If the teachers who had disobeyed the law should receive their pay, they would receive it contrary to law.

Mr. GREEN said he had supposed the members were desirous of having the question definitely settled. This was one of those inevitable differences which ought not to be settled by any Court. He thought the local Board deserved to be applauded for their moderation on the subject, and not hurried into a law suit. The Fourteenth Ward intended, if possible to avoid litigation by some practicable method, and he could not see what more could be required than the offer of the local Board of the Sixth Ward.

The motion to refer was lost by a vote of 15 to 22, as was the motion to lay the resolution directing the payment of the salaries on the table.

Mr. BLOOMFIELD was about to offer an amendment, when the President decided that the resolution was not properly up for action, as it had not been referred to a Committee, and that consequently he could not entertain Mr. BLOOMFIELD'S amendment, which nevertheless was read, as follows:

Resolved, That the penalty imposed upon the teachers for violation of the by-laws respecting the reading of the Holy Scriptures, for the month of September last, be remitted, except in the case of the Principal of the Public School No. 5; and that the President and Secretary of the Board be directed to sign drafts for the payment of such teachers, upon the commencement of a legal action by the said Principal of School No. 5, against this Board, to test the legality of such by-law, and upon the said Principal signing a stipulation in said action to waive any objection that the by-laws do not impose the duty on principals or teachers of a compliance therewith; and that the sum of $500 be hereby appropriated to pay the expenses of this action.

When the amendment had been read, the President reiterated his opinion that neither the resolution nor the amendment was properly before the Board, and that they could not be considered.

Mr. BLOOMFIELD appealed from the decision of the Chair, and the Chair was sustained. There were then motions to adjourn and calls for order, until it appeared as if the meeting would break up in confusion; but finally order was restored, and a motion to adjourn was carried.

REGISTRY OF CITY ELECTORS.

LIST OF THE NUMBERS ENROLLED IN EACH WARD.

The work of correcting the registers of City voters was concluded yesterday. In order to furnish the Press and the public with as correct a list of the number of voters as possible, enrolled in the various Wards, Mr. Superintendent PILSBURY issued an order to have the aggregate number registered in each Ward reported to head-quarters. By this timely aid of the Police telegraph, and by the prompt cooperation of the Police of the City, we are enabled to publish the following table, showing the actual number of names contained in the different registers in the City. The Registrars furnished the Police with the information promptly, with the exception of the Fifth, Eighth, Ninth and Tenth Districts of the Fourteenth Ward, where they refused to give the numbers enrolled. In the Twenty-third Ward the telegraph instrument was deranged, which prevented them from making any report. A large portion of the Wards reported after 9 o'clock P. M.:

Wards.	Numbers registered.	Wards.	Numbers registered.
1	2,408	13	4,056
2	532	14	(partial,) 2,303
3	850	15	4,026
4	3,220	16	4,826
5	3,616	17	9,135
6	3,442	18	8,262
7	5,327	19	3,622
8	4,761	20	8,562
9	6,950	21	5,245
10	3,772	22	5,153
11	6,736	23	No report.
12	2,708	Total	99,762

It is estimated that the foregoing statement is a close approximation to the number of actual voters in the City.

Embarrassments, however, are likely to occur on election day from informalities in carrying out the law. In many cases the Christian name is left off, and in many others the initials of it only are given. In copying from the November poll-list some inaccuracies as to residence have no doubt been committed. But, all things considered, the present is regarded as a vastly improved list of voters over any one heretofore existing.

REGISTRATION IN BROOKLYN.

The different polling-places in Brooklyn were open yesterday and Tuesday in compliance with the law. In several of the Wards it was ascertained that not more than one-half of the legal voters were upon the lists prepared by the Registrars, but it is believed that nearly all have recorded their names during the last two days.

PREPARATIONS FOR ELECTION.

Nearly all the Inspectors and Canvassers who are to serve at the ensuing election have been sworn in. The clerks in the County Clerk's office have been busy daily administering the oath of office to them ever since they were appointed. The poll clerks are sworn in at the polls by the Inspectors on election day. The clerks of the Superior Court and Court of Common Pleas have had their hands full for some weeks past in attending to the candidates for naturalization, and have qualified a large number. The once

PEOPLE'S MASS MEETING.

RATIFICATION OF INDEPENDENT NOMINATIONS IN THE EIGHTEENTH WARD.

A mass meeting of citizens of the Eighteenth Ward, who support Hon. GEORGE OPDYKE, the People's candidate for State Senator from the Sixth District, and Col. JOHN S. COCKS for Assemblyman of the Fourteenth District, was held last evening at the Demilt Dispensary, corner of Twenty-third-street and Second-avenue. The meeting was a large one.

Mr. BENJAMIN WARDEN was called to the Chair, and a list of Vice-Presidents and Secretaries was presented and ratified. Mr. WARDEN addressed the meeting. He said he was a workingman. It was not customary to elevate a workingman to the Chair at a political meeting. Generally Governor So-and-so or Senator So-and-so was called on to preside. He hoped that a revolution was about to commence in this respect. He deprecated the contumely which was heaped upon workingmen, on all possible occasions, sharply rebuked the Herald for its course with regard to the workingmen, and expressed himself strongly on the subject of Slavery. He had lived in the South, but while there he had kept his principles to himself. He had not been so foolish as old BROWN was when he was in the lion's den. The North was the only part of the United States where Liberty dwelt. At the South, printing-presses were destroyed if those who conducted them expressed sentiments opposed to the slave interest. It was no crime there thus to destroy a poor man's property, but if a rich man's slave was taken from him, a tremendous outcry followed. Mr. WARDEN expressed his opposition to BENJAMIN F. MANIERRE, Esq., the Republican nominee for State Senator from the same District, and concluded amid loud applause.

Hon. JAMES BROOKS was next introduced. He said he was glad to meet here those who belonged to the same party that he did—that was a party that voted for whoever they pleased, consulting only their own judgment, and free from the shackles of party machinery. Mr. OPDYKE had represented the District at Albany last year, and his constituents were going to nominate him again when there came a voice from Albany telling them to oppose him, and he was crushed to pieces in the party machine. Then he had advised Mr. OPDYKE to run as an independent candidate. Mr. BROOKS spoke at length of the degradation of the politics of the present day. He, himself, had had a worthless woman in his house who had offered to sell to him her man, and his exertions in behalf of his (Mr. BROOKS') election to office, for $300. He had been ashamed to look his wife and children in the face on account of the visits from worthless women on such errands as this which he had received. He knew the difficulty of fighting against party machinery; but by united action the people would conquer. There were no such slaves in the world as the slaves of "the regular nominations." Now was the day, now was the hour to break their chains.

Mr. CHARLES G. MURCH now came forward, holding in his hands the resolutions. Before reading them he made a speech. He said he had graduated in the back part of a hat-store, and was a Harbor Master. He would reveal the system by which nominations were effected. He, with 130 good citizens of the Ward, had gone into a Republican meeting for the purpose of making nominations, where, though in reality these good citizens were in the majority, they were overruled by false records of the list of voters. He had gone to the Executive Committee and openly opposed party schemes, though he knew that he thereby sacrificed his Harbor Master's berth. The resolutions indorsed the nominations of Mr. OPDYKE and Col. COCKS.

Mr. GEO. G. BELLOWS was the next speaker. He, too, denounced party machinery. New-York was proverbially the worst-governed City on the Continent. Too long had the shoulder-hitters carried everything their own way. It was time that the citizens arose and placed men of integrity in office. Men were afraid to go to the polls and vote for fear of soiling their silk-stockings,—for fear that the rowdies would brush too roughly against them. It was time that they went to the polls if necessary with pistols in their hands and exercised their sacred prerogative. When Mr. BELLOWS had concluded, a resolution inviting the other Wards to join in the movement against party machinery, was adopted, and those who composed the meeting proceeded in a body to the residence of Col. COCKS, in Seventeenth-street, to congratulate him upon his nomination. Col. COCKS made a speech, accepting the nomination and thanking them for it.

REPUBLICAN MEETING IN THE ELEVENTH WARD.

A mass meeting of the Republicans of the Eleventh Ward, under the auspices of the Ward Association, was held last evening at their head-quarters, No. 21 Avenue D, to ratify the party nominations. Mr. THOMAS DOYLE, President of the Association, occupied the Chair.

The meeting was addressed by HORACE GREELEY, Ex-Judge BIRDSALL, and Mr. JAMES TERWILLIGER, candidate for Assembly in the Eighth District. Mr. GREELEY, contrary to expectation, did not make any special allusion to JOHN BROWN and his Harper's Ferry raid, but confined his remarks principally to the elucidation of the principles of the Republican Party, and urged the necessity of continued effort to secure their triumph.

Ex-Judge BIRDSALL drew a parallel between the North and the South with respect to liberty of speech and action, and compared the claims of the Republican and the Democratic Parties upon the suffrages of the free laboring men of the North. The Democratic Party was like an old man in his dotage, who rejected the principles of action which had governed him in his prime. It had become old and insane, its insanity consisting in its efforts to promulgate Slavery, and needed the treatment with which other specific forms of insanity were met—confinement. It was as much insane, in fact, as Old JOHN BROWN, of Ossawatomie, only its insanity tended to an opposite end. The speaker disclaimed for the Republican Party any sympathy or responsibility for the acts of BROWN. They were simply the acts of an individual, with which the Republicans had nothing whatever to do. They might sympathize with him as a mistaken and unfortunate man, but they utterly condemned his acts of treason and murder, and his resistance to authority. In this connection the speaker alluded to the address of Gov. WISE to the populace of Richmond, on his return from Harper's Ferry, in which he declared that although he knew the captured insurrectionists belonged properly under the jurisdiction of the United States, still he was determined they should never be given up until they had been hung as high as Haman. This language he characterized as treasonable, and coming from the Chief Executive officer of Virginia, was peculiarly significant. The speaker concluded by warning his hearers against the encroachments of the Slave Power, and urging them to do their duty on Tuesday next in support of the nominees of the Republican Party.

The remarks of Mr. TERWILLIGER were mainly confined to a discussion of the merits of the State canvass.

The meeting adjourned until to-night, when the Association will proceed in a body to attend the mass ratification meeting at the Cooper Institute.

THE REPUBLICAN CENTRAL COMMITTEE.

The Republican Central Committee held a largely attended meeting last evening. The matters before it were of purely business character, having special reference to the preparations for the coming election.

SECOND ASSEMBLY DISTRICT.

At a meeting of the Republicans of the Second Assembly District, comprising parts of the Fourth and Sixth Wards, TIMOTHY CONNELLY, who is already upon the "People's" ticket, was nominated as candidate for Assembly.

ANOTHER STEAMER SUNK.

The Steamboat Champion Run Down, and Three Lives Reported Lost.

The steamboat Champion, Capt. JOHN BROWN, of the New-York and New-Haven line, left this City about 3 A. M., yesterday, bound to New-Haven. She had only a moderate quantity of freight, and about forty passengers, a portion of whom were ladies and children. When off Mattinicock Point, about 5 o'clock, she came in collision with the large screw-steamer Albatross, from Providence. The Champion was cut down below her water line, and immediately began to sink. The passengers were nearly all in their berths at the time, and a scene of wild confusion ensued, men and women rushing out of the cabins and state-rooms in their night clothes, and clutching at the life-preservers, settees, and other moveable articles, expecting to be obliged to swim. As it was still quite dark, it was some minutes before the cause of alarm could be explained, but soon the propeller was seen near the Champion, and their fears were quieted. Every facility was afforded the passengers for getting on board of the propeller, which was found not to be seriously damaged, and in a short time all who wished to leave had an opportunity of doing so much of their personal baggage, in the confusion of the moment, being left behind. A fireman, whose name is not given, was killed by the collision, and two passengers are reported missing, one of whom is Mr. STEELE, of New-Haven. The steamer Croton, bound to New-York, soon came up and took off the remaining passengers from the Champion, as well as those who had taken refuge on board the Albatross. To prevent her from sinking in deep water, the Croton, aided by the Albatross, then towed her into shoal water, where she filled and sank, leaving only her upper deck out of water. The passengers then came to the City on board of the Croton, and the Company immediately dispatched a steamer and a force of men to save the freight and baggage.

The Champion is an old boat, and has been employed on this line ten or twelve years. For the last year or two she has principally carried freight. She will be raised, it is thought, without difficulty.

Capt. JONES, of the Albatross, states that the Champion was first seen at a point and a half on their starboard bow, and should have kept her course, passing to the northward of the propeller, instead of which she put her helm hard-a-port, and came square across the propeller's bow, which struck the Champion nearly amidships on her port side. The starboard side of the propeller's bow was cut through in two places, but the damage was only slight.

THE GREAT AIR-SHIP.

Progress of the Work of Inflation—The Articles Exhibited at Reservoir-square—Number of Visitors.

The process of inflating the monster balloon, The City of New-York, is proceeding slowly, but steadily, at Reservoir-square. Thither thousands of visitors go daily to witness it, and to examine the life-boat, the basket, the caloric engine, the lime stove, the anchors, the drag, the copper-float, and other apparatus to be used in the aerial voyage to Europe. All these are on exhibition beneath the tent into which the visitor enters immediately after passing within the inclosure. The boat, which is a staunch looking craft, attracts much attention. Prof. LOWE, himself, watched its construction very closely, and pronounces it an excellent piece of workmanship. On its sides are painted the words, "Leontine, New-York." It bears this name in honor of Mrs. LOWE. Attached to it are the appliances for raising and lowering and changing the course of the balloon. The caloric engine is kept hard at work all day long. It is of four horse power and weighs 35 pounds. The platform upon which the boat and the engine are placed, is draped with American flags, and on either side of it the other articles on exhibition are arranged very tastefully. A great many stop to examine the fur coat, cap, shoes and gloves, which Prof. LOWE is to wear in the cold regions of the upper air, and the robes and blankets which he is to carry with him. There is nothing remarkable in their appearance or construction; but they are interesting because they serve to remind one of the discomforts which the aeronauts must provide against. The term of perpetual congelation in this latitude is less than two miles high, and if the City of New-York ascends far above it, her passengers will be compelled to dress like the Esquimaux. The upper portion of the balloon is expanded to its full breadth, and already rises several feet higher than the fence that surrounds Reservoir-square; so the outsiders who look through the opening in the boards can really see something within, and their number is largely increased. Yesterday when the gas was shut off there were 60,000 feet of the buoyant element within the balloon. It will not be inflated to its full extent until it starts on its voyage, and none but those who accompany it will ever see its proportions fully expanded. Between 500,000 and 600,000 cubic feet of carburetted hydrogen will be conducted into the air-bag before it leaves the earth, but the volume of the fluid will increase as it ascends until the envelope is entirely distended. Prof. LOWE is personally superintending the work of inflation, and is constantly on the ground. He is, of course, the centre of attraction. During Tuesday—the day on which the inflation commenced—3,785 persons attended the exhibition, and yesterday about 5,000 were admitted. The visitors are as respectable in appearance as in numbers; they obey implicitly the injunction to stay without the rope barrier which divides the space set apart for the spectators from that appropriated to the balloon and its appurtenances. Several policemen are stationed on the premises to preserve order; their task has been a very easy one. The precise day of Prof. LOWE'S departure is not fixed, but he gives every assurance that he will go, and appears to entertain little doubt that he will reach the other side of the Atlantic. At the same time, he confesses that the exact spot on the other side at which he will descend cannot be calculated with any degree of certainty.

The New-York State Arsenal.

The undersigned, having thoroughly examined the State Arsenal on the corner of Thirty-fifth-street and Seventh-avenue, deem it due to the Commissioners, Messrs. TOWNSEND, SHEEMAN and WELCH, to the architect, Mr. RITCH, and to the contractor, Mr. GODWIN, in view of the reports which have been put in circulation, and to which more importance has been attached because of the falling of a building on the same site one year ago than usually accompanies such rumors, to state that we not only believe the building to be entirely safe in all respects, but eminently strong and substantial:

WEDNESDAY, Nov. 2—P. M.

The Stock Exchange to-day shows a further and pretty general improvement in prices. The temper of the market appears firm rather than buoyant. The demand is fair and well distributed through the Share and Bond list, while, with some few exceptions, the offers to sell, either cash or on time, are less free than last week. The inquiry for the common shares of the Erie and Southern Michigan Companies, which were depressed some weeks ago to $4, are attracting attention, and there is also a demand to-day for the long-neglected shares of the Cleveland and Pittsburgh Company. Erie brought $8½; Michigan Southern $6½, and $6¼
